UNION MEN INDICTED IN NEW YORK

Joseph S. Fay (left), Newark, N. J., International vice-president of the Union of Operating Engineers, AFL, and James Bove (right), Long Island City, N. Y., International vice-president of the Hod Carriers' Union, AFL, are booked at a New York City police station. They were indicted on charges of extorting more than $300,000 from construction syndicates building the $300,000,000 Delaware Aqueduct project and conspiracy to extort $703,000 from firms operating in New York and upstate counties.

GAS SHORTAGE MAY RESULT IN STILL LOWER RATIONS

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The gasoline shortage on the eastern seaboard halted tractors on thousands of farms, caused many filling stations to close, and brought talk tonight of further restrictions on automobile driving in both the east and the middle west.

The War Food Administration declared a crisis in food production had developed from Virginia northward through New England due to lack of gas to operate tractors and other farm machinery.

Unless there is quick relief, it said, some farm lands will not be planted at all this year.

May Cut Commercial Use

Officials of the Office of Price Administration, the petroleum administration and the Office of Defense Transportation all were discussing the situation. It was indicated that one matter under consideration was whether use of gasoline by commercial vehicles could be reduced.

Word came from Secretary Ickes that the east will have to cut its gasoline consumption still further and that new restrictions may be put into effect in the middle west so that some gasoline may be diverted from there to the seaboard area.

Ickes declined to say whether restrictions in the middle west might take the form of a ban on pleasure driving such as went into effect at noon today in twelve eastern states and the District of Columbia.

Ickes Criticizes OPA

That is up to the Office of Price Administration, he said.

Ickes discussed the eastern gasoline shortage at a press conference as petroleum administrator, and, by inference, was critical of the OPA for not having re-imposed the pleasure-driving ban earlier.

Germans Attempt To Move Troops Out of Caucasus

Russia Reports Fighting in Vicinity of Novorossisk

LONDON, Friday, May 21 (AP) — The Russians today announced an attempt by the Germans to move troops by water in the vicinity of the Kerch strait between the Caucasus and the Crimea, without indicating immediately whether the Nazis were attempting to reinforce their narrow Caucasus bridgehead about Novorossisk, or evacuate forces from it.

Reporting an action unusual in the long fighting at this key point, the Soviet midnight communique as recorded by the Soviet monitor said that ships of the Red fleet and planes sank six self-propelled barges "carrying enemy troops."

Action in Black Sea

The action occurred in the Black Sea in the area of Kerch, at the tip of the Kerch Peninsula of the Crimea, and of Anapa, on the Caucasus coast forty-five miles southeast of Kerch and twenty-five miles northwest of Novorossisk.

At the same time the Russians reported what may have been yet another attempt of the besieged Germans to break out of their Novorossisk trap by land. The midnight communique said that on one sector northeast of the big port the Germans attempted to attack Soviet positions with four infantry regiments, striking out after heavy artillery and mortar preparations.

German Losses Heavy

"Fighters of one unit met the enemy with a powerful barrage fire and then launched a counterattack," the late bulletin added. "The enemy suffered heavy losses and was thrown back. The Soviet units captured war material and took prisoners."

The Germans may have been attacking to relieve the Russian pressure on the Novorossisk position, which had been increasing steadily for months, at a stepped-up tempo in recent weeks.

There was no indication of the number of troops involved in the barage movement. If large, this Caucasus front, which was the first of the many eastern front sectors to be dried of spring mud, may be ready for heavy action.

Davies Presents F.D.R.'s Secret Letter to Stalin

President's Special Envoy Meets Russian Marshal in the Kremlin

MOSCOW, May 20. (AP)—Joseph E. Davies handed President Roosevelt's secret message to Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin in the Kremlin early tonight.

The president's special envoy delivered the letter after spending some time with Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov at the end of an airplane flight from the United States.

Davies was disclosed to have used the same four-motored plane in which the president flew to Casablanca last January for that Allied conference.

(Transmission of the message followed by a day British Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Washington Wednesday that he and the president "earnestly hope that at no distant date we may be able to achieve what we have so long sought—namely, a meeting with Marshal Stalin and if possible with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek."

Message Still Secret

(President Roosevelt said early this month that only he and his secretary-typist were aware of the contents of the note to Stalin, and declined to say whether a reply was expected. Davies, he said, presumably would become acquainted with the contents of the letter after its delivery, would discuss them with Stalin, and then return home.)

The Russian press gave generous space to the arrival of Davies, who had not seen Moscow since he left his ambassador post five years ago. But there was no speculation about his mission here.

The former ambassador gave a statement to the Russian press which was prominently displayed. In it he praised Russia's "wonderful resistance to the Huns."

Sees Allied Victory

"My country entered this world war late," the statement said. "But I can assure you that in respect to prepartion of human reserves and mechanized might, we at present are reaching high standards of our possibilities."

Davies added that Germany's defeat is "as evident as the fact that after night comes day."

Soviet newspapers also printed many dispatches of American and British war news, including Prime Minister Churchill's Washington address, statements by President Roosevelt, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's announcement on Axis prisoners in Tunisia, an account of the RAF raids which broke German dams, and a story of American operations against the Japanese on Attu island.

No Pleasure Driving In Baltimore Taxis

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—The Maryland Public Service Commission announced today that taxicabs operating in Baltimore City will be prohibited beginning tomorrow from transporting passengers to or from places of amusement or recreation.

The order, in line with the Office of Price Administration's renewal of the ban on pleasure driving, also prohibited cabs in the city and environs from being used for sightseeing, and specifically banned transporting fares to or from race tracks.

Five Young Men Get 210 Years As Gangsters

Judge O'Dunne Gives Stiff Sentences to Group of Criminals

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Judge Eugene O'Dunne of the city supreme bench today imposed jail sentences totaling 210 years on five young men convicted of a series of four holdups, and called the defendants "one of the boldest groups of criminals to operate in Baltimore since the days of the Whittemore gang."

Some years ago a gang led by Richard Whittemore terrorized sections of the city with a series of daring holdups. Whittemore himself was finally captured in Boston, returned to Baltimore where he killed a guard while escaping from prison and was hanged.

Charles Schemm, 23, Anton Zornak, 24, and Salvadore Appitito, 20, each received sentences of fifty years in the penitentiary. Henry Fleece, 22, and Paul Black, 19, were sentenced to 30 years each.

Judge O'Dunne told the three sentenced to serve fifty years that if the state legislature had made death sentences possible for armed robberies he would willingly have imposed them in their cases. He declared that "a more lawless gang does not exist in the west, north or south."

Schemm was convicted of attempting to shoot one of the two policemen who arrested him; Zornak was found guilty of clubbing a robbery victim with a blackjack. Fleece, found to have been unarmed during the robberies, was convicted of having gone through the pockets of the numerous victims of the five; Black was said by police to have driven the bandit car.

The series of holdups in which the young men were involved began on the night of April 8, when the proprietor and other persons in a drug store on the Reisterstown road were held up. Later that same night, three taverns were entered and the proprietors and patrons robbed.

The defendants were called before the judge singly for sentencing. When the men were brought before the court for the first time about two weeks ago, special police guards were maintained in the courtroom.

Today, armed guards were posted throughout the criminal court room and in other sections of the courthouse.

Judge O'Dunne explained that "we have reliable information that they planned to make a getaway by disarming police officers and trying to shoot it out."

$29,463,687,198 Voted For Navy, Roosevelt Asks $59,425,586,500 More

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The House passed today without a dissenting vote a $29,463,687,198 appropriation for the navy, the largest single year's allotment in history, but this astronomical figure was eclipsed immediately by a presidential request for almost two and one-half times as much—$71,898,499,700 for the army.

The chief executive asked an appropriation of $59,425,586,500 for the army plus use of $12,472,913,200 of unobligated balances of current appropriations. The total is $6,000,000,000 above his January budget estimate.

AMERICAN FORCES CLOSING IN ON JAPS ON ATTU ISLE

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The battle for Attu island has swept into its final phase with American troops attacking Japanese forces hopefully trapped on the shore of Chicagof Harbor, official reports revealed today. Warships and bombers are supporting the assault.

Stiff opposition is being encountered and United States casualties may be heavier than any yet experienced in fighting, but an early conclusion is expected to the victorious effort to throw the enemy off the island.

The airfield which the Japanese were building on Attu is in American hands. One of the first American projects in development of the island probably will be the completion of this field which would give our forces an air base about 2,200 statute miles from Tokyo.

The field would be useful in helping to cut off the enemy's main Aleutians base on Kiska from reinforcements and supplies and in softening up Kiska defenses for the eventual drive to annihilate the enemy garrison on that island also.

Latest reports of the ten-day old battle came from the navy department and Secretary of War Stimson.

These disclosed that the American forces, under Major General Eugene Landrum, a veteran of Aleutians operations, have executed successive pincer maneuvers to drive the Japanese into their last stand position at Chicagof Harbor at the island's northeastern extremity.

The last move was accomplished yesterday when our troops captured Sarana Pass opening on the foes' southeastern flank. Tuesday they had completed clearing a pass between Massacre and Holtz Bays to join American forces advancing from the south with those driving from the north and flank the Japanese on the southwest.

Maryland Drivers Given Respite in Ban Enforcement

O'Conor and Walsh Studying Situation Before Taking Action

[By The Associated Press]

Maryland automobile drivers began their second World War II experience with a total ban on pleasure driving yesterday noon, but actual enforcement of the prohibition was held in abeyance pending clarification of procedure.

Cornelius P. Mundy, chief enforcement attorney for the State Office of Price Administration in Baltimore, said no instructions for enforcing the ban had been given to police officers of the state or of Baltibmore city.

In addition, Mundy said, the state OPA would allow motorists some little time to become used to the prohibition, which became effective in twelve Eastern states.

Delays Enforcement

"Obviously, it would be unfair to begin enforcement precisely at noon, for many still are unaware ot the ban," he added.

He did not say exactly when enforcement would begin.

State OPA Director Leo H. McCormick, however, said that forty-five OPA agents, led by Chief Investigator Henry A. Queen, had already begun last night a tour of amusement spots in the Baltimore area, looking for possible violators.

McCormick said he had instructed the men to "get tough and make your cases stick againt these misusers of gasoline."

Meanwhile, the Public Service Commission put into effect last midnight a ban on the use of taxicabs for visiting places of amusement.

Col. Beverly Ober, state liquor superintendent, said state patrolmen would begin today to observe suspected violators, pending clarification of their authority to stop cars and question drivers.

O'Conor To Go Slow

Governor O'Sonor said in Annapolis he had received no formal word of the ban from Federal OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown.

"Even when I receive Mr. Brown's request for state assistance in enforcing the pleasure driving rules," he added, "I will have to submit his request to the attorney general.

"There is considerable question as to how far the state may go in enforcing the ban, and I will not give instructions to the state police until I am quite certain I have a right to do so."

In Baltimore, Police Commissioned Robert F. Stanton ordered city police to start taking license numbers of automobiles found parked near places of amusement. He said

21,000 Employes Quit; 85,000 May Join in Walkout

Production of Bomber Planes Threatened by Labor Dispute

Stoppage Is Most Serious in Plants Since Pearl Harbor

DETROIT, May 20 (AP) — Three war plants of Chrysler Corporation were closed down today in a wave of strikes which saw more than 21,000 employes leave their jobs and and a corporation spokesman expressed fear that all 85,000 Chrysler workers in the country might be affected.

The stoppage was the most serious here since Pearl Harbor.

The walkout began at the Jefferson-Kercheval plant, with United Automobile Workers-CIO leaders claiming that collective bargaining had "completely broken down." Within a short time, workers at the Dodge main plant and Dodge Lynch road plants joined the walkout.

Several thousand workers at the Dodge truck plant also were idle because of lack of materials.

129,000 Hours Lost

A Chrysler spokesman said the tank arsenal might be forced to close tomorrow if the strikes continued. He estimated that a total of 129,000 man-hours of work were lost today.

Carl Schedler, deputy executive director of the National War Labor Board at Washington, late today telegraphed heads of the two local unions involved as follows: "The national interest demands that the strikers employed at the Jefferson-Kercheval and Dodge plants of Chrysler Corporation return to work immediately."

Wires Union Leaders

The telegrams were sent to Ed Carey, president of UAW-CIO Local 7, and to Early Reynolds, president of Local 3.

Before this action Reynolds was quoted as saying, "our men are willing to work for the government any time, if the government wants to take over."

A union statement charged the strikes were a result of "agitation" by the management and constituted a "spontaneous demonstration." The company spokesman insisted that the strikes were planned and "undoubtedly authorized" by the union.

A dispute over a new company-union contract to replace an agreement which expired last November is in the hands of the War Labor Board. The strikes affected Chrysler's production of medium bomber planes, anti-aircraft guns, tank engines and other war materiel.

The Chrysler spokesman said that the Kercheval and Jefferson plants fabricate parts for every weapon made by Chrysler and warned, "If this strike is not settled, the corporation's entire force of 85,000 workers throughout the United States will face layoff." Chrysler has nine plants in Detroit.

Greek Ship Torpedoed by U-Boat; Manacled Captain Goes to Bottom

RECIFE, BRAZIL, May 20 (AP)—The sinking of the 9,300-ton Greek ship Edifots became known today and reports were current that her captain probably perished as a menacled prisoner aboard a subsequently disabled U-boat which was scuuttled when overtaken by a British destroyer.

Survivors of the Edifots and the imprisoned crew of the scuttled U-boat have arrived in Recife.

The Edifots was torpedoed and shelled to the bottom May 1 while enroute from Buenos Aires to North Africa with a linseed cargo and the captain was taken aboard the attacking U-boat, the survivors related.

A U-boat was located early this month off northeastern Brazil with insufficient fuel to reach an Axis or neutral port and unable to submerge because of engine damage.

It was reported that when the British destroyer came upon the surfaced raider there was fighting going on in the submarine in which some of the U-boat crew were injured.

A few minutes after the crewmen left the sumbarine and were picked up by the British, these reports said, a violent explosion sent the U-boat to the bottom.

Persons who talked with captured U-boat crew members who are still in Recife, said the prisoners knew nothing of the Axis defeat in North Africa and stubbornly refused to believe there had been a rout in Tunisia.

The Edifots was reported sunk 415 miles off the Brazilian island of Fernando Noronha.

Eighteen survivors reached Fernando Noronha in one lifeboat and were brought here by plane.

They said their captain was taken prisoner aboard the submarine. Two lifeboats containing the remaining nineteen members of the Greek's crew are missing

Roosevelt, Churchill and Members Of Council Survey War Situation

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP) — President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill of Britain and Prime Minister King of Canada surveyed with members of the Pacific War Council today all the aspects of the World War, and one member said afterward that the picture looked "optimistic."

There was no evidence, however, that the president or Churchill disclosed any specific plans they may have for new blows against Japan.

Discussion of the war in the Pacific apparently was in the most general terms, and the British ambassador, Lord Halifax, pointed out that "as always, one of the main elements in the problem stands out: "shipping."

All Allies Represented

Serving on the council are representatives of all the United Nations actively engaged in the war in the Pacific. Today's meeting took place against the background of Churchill's speech to Congress yesterday in which he pledged his country to fight Japan while there is breath or blood in the bodies of Englishmen.

When Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese foreign minister was asked whether he felt more optimistic about the Pacific situation in the light of that address, he answered: "I wish I could tell you."

It was Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands ambassador to the United States, who said the overall picture of the war looked optimistic.

Review War Situation

Council members said they had reviewed the war situation generally and its affect on Pacific operations.

"We traveled everywhere, as far as the Pacific is concerned, from the Aleutians south," said Leighton McCarthy, Canadian minister to this country. "The president and Prime Minister Churchill both surveyed the situation from their own points of view, or, I might say, from their joint points of view."

Hope Held Out For Settlement Of Tax Struggle

Treasury Orders 120 Carloads of Paper To Prepare Forms

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP) — Hope for a break in the pay-as-you-go income tax deadlock was revived tonight, and it was disclosed that the treasury had ordered 120 carloads of paper to prepare forms for putting a current tax system into effect July 1.

A Senate-House conference committee held its first meeting in an effort to iron out differences between the two chambers. Democrats and Republicans alike voiced optimism at the prospect that the committee would find a compromise between the Senate's modified Ruml skip-a-year bill and the House-approved measure abating the six per cent normal and thirteen per cent bracket surtax on all 1942 incomes.

Senator George (D-Ga), chairman of the Senate Finance committee, said the treasury had advised him of its order for paper which would be used to install a twenty per cent withholding levy against the taxable portions of wages and salaries.

Treasury officials said payroll deductions could be started within two or three weeks after the president signs a bill, although they emphasized they would like more time if possible.

George Optimistic

The Georgian told newspapermen he was hopeful the conferees could reach an agreement tomorrow.

"The spirit is one of compromise," he said. "The majority and minority of both houses are working in that spirit."

Rep. Knutson (R-Minn), leader of the House Republicans who battled for the modified Ruml plan, said "it doesn't look hopeless. We haven't voted down anything. We're still in the stage of conversation."

The conferees disclosed they discussed two possible compromises:

1. By George, to abate seventy-five per cent of one year's tax obligations for each taxpayer. The Senate rejected this proposal before it passed the modified Ruml plan.

2. A suggestion by Sen. Byrd (D-Va) that fifty per cent of one year's liabilities might be abated for each taxpayer.

Withholding Tax Likely

Whatever compromise is agreed upon, if any, it is virtually certain to embody the twenty per cent withholding levy, providing weekly, semi-monthly or monthly deductions from pay envelopes and salary checks for the current collection of taxes at rates now in the statute books.

The conference committee was named by the two legislative bodies to seek a compromise between the Senate's modified version of the Ruml plan, under which the lesser of either 1942 or 1943 taxes would be abated for all persons except those with wartime windfall incomes, and the House measure, which would erase last year's tax obligations completely for about ninety per cent of taxpayers and made substantial reductions for others.

Ultimatum by George

George preceded the opening of the conference committee sessions with a virtual ultimatum, declaring that unless the conferees could agree within three days he would be ready to abandon pay-as-you-go legislation completely for this session of Congress.

However, after the session he was optimistic and told newsmen about the treasury's paper order. One legislator added, however, that if the compromise efforts collapsed the paper "can be used for something else."

the information would be turned over the the OPA.

Attorney General William C. Walsh said the entire problem of state enforcement of a federal directive was a difficult one to decide.

"Pending the study of the question I would rather not attempt to make a verbal ruling on the whole matter of aiding in the enforcement of OPA or other federal ration rulings," Walsh declared.

"This is a most difficult matter to decide, and even the question of stopping and questioning motorists on the highway and reporting them to the OPA as possible violators is an extremely delicate one.

"This also applies to the matter of driving more than thirty-five miles an hour.

"The last legislature had an opportunity to straighten the whole matter out, but apparently did not want to, so the question of state co-operation is still extremely difficult to handle."

Mundy said he was quite certain no motorists would be stopped in the state for questioning.

Will Report Violators

"OPA inspectors and police forces will report apparent violators of the ban. Letters requesting explanations will be sent to the reported motorists. If the motorists can supply a valid reason for the use of their cars at the reported time, the matter will end there. If not, the motorists will be summoned before hearing boards to tell their stories in person."

Mundy said OPA agents had already begun to note the license numbers of suspected violators late yesterday.

73 Axis Planes Destroyed by U. S. Fliers in Raids on Italian Ports

By NOLAND NORGAARD

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, May 20 (AP) — Maj.-Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force announced today the destruction of seventy-three enemy planes during heavy raids yesterday on Italy's anti-invasion outposts of Sicily and Sardinia. The Allied cost was four aircraft.

This 18-for-1 victory took a tremendous bite out of hurriedly-assembled Axis air strength on the two islands, and was the most sweeping since German and Italian airmen were chased from the Tunisian skies just before the enemy army's collapse in North Africa.

Twenty-nine planes were shot down in bitter dogfights ranging from sea level to 24,000 feet and forty-four others were blasted to bits on airfields on the two islands.

For the first time since the fall of Tunisia German and Italian airmen rose in great strength, but failed to ward off the Allied raiders whose explosives ripped apart airport buildings and set fires amid parked aircraft.

The biggest blow was dealt by Flying Fortresses. Sailing over Milo airfield near Trapani on the western side of Sicily, the big bombers destroyed thirty-seven parked planes and blanketed the field and installations with bombs.

Then fifty Axis fighters jumped the Fortresses and their escorting Lightnings. Ten of these enemy planes were shot down and at least three others were damaged in a twenty-minute running battle which raged out over the sea toward the Egadi islands.

demand for portal-to-portal pay. This would mean compensating the miners for all the time they spend traveling to and from their actual working places under ground; that is, from the time they cross the portal of the mine going in until they cross it coming out at the end of the day. At the present time their seven-hour day covers only the actual productive hours.

May Get Travel Time

The miners contend their underground travel time averages about an hour and a half a day. Compensation for this, if paid at straight time rates, would mean an increase of about $1.50 a day. However, the miners 1941 contract provides for time and one half after thirty-five hours, and payments for travel time on that basis would mean an increase in daily earnings of $2.25. But there was no indication just what the board's final decision would be on such matters.

Operators contend that the underground travel time always has been reflected in the rates paid to underground workers which exceed those paid to surface employes.

The miners also are asking for the elimination of charges for tools and equipment.

Largest of these items is the cap lamp rental, seven to eight cents a day. Safety shoes and hats cost about $13 a year, the operators estimate. Blacksmithing costs run about half a cent to three quarters of a cent per ton of coal.

There is some dispute whether miners are asking for free blasting powder. This is estimated to cost about three and one half cents per ton of coal. Altogether the occupational deductions amount to about $4 a month.

Records of the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics say the soft coal miners made nearly $43 a week in March and had an average work week of 38.3 hours. These figures represent an increase of 32 per cent in earnings since March 1942 and an increase of 21.7 per cent in working hours. The miners contend the figures are too high to be representative of the industry generally.

Russia May Be Scene of Great Summer Battle

Glenn Babb Discusses Possible Plans To Defeat Hitler

By GLENN BABB
Associated Press Staff Writer

In spite of all the conjecture as to where and when the Western Allies will invade Hitler's Europe the likelihood remains that this year, as in 1941 and 1942, the great land battles will be fought in Russia.

Prime Minister Churchill in his speech to Congress Wednesday threw out a timely reminder that the Eastern front remains the primary land front. Any other that the British and Americans may establish will be second in size of forces involved as well as in time.

Hitler May Attack Soon

The evidence increases that in spite of the invasion threat the fuehrer is marshalling all possible resources for another smash at Russia. Major operations have been postponed this spring later than last—when the Germans attacked in the Crimea on May 8—but it appears impossible that the first real blow can be delayed much longer.

We still are without any trustworthy indication as to whether the Germans or Russians will attack first, but it is likely to be Hitler, since a greater need drives him. He can not afford to wait; Stalin can.

The British prime minister, whose information doubtless is of the best, estimated that Axis forces held on the Russian front were 190 German and 218 satillite divisions, 308 in all. That, allowing for corps and army troops, air forces, other auxiliaries, would mean some 4,000,000 men or more, probably still the most formidable aggregation of land forces in the world.

Confronting them probably are Russian armies of at least equal size. There is no chance that the western allies will land anything comparable in Europe this year or be able to divert anything like such a total of the enemy.

The flower and the bulk of the German army remain in Russia, and other land campaigns of the coming summer and autumn probably must be regarded from the strategical point of view as diversions.

It is difficult to see how the Allies can "take more of the weight off Russia" as Churchill promised except by operations which will compel Hitler to divert a large portion of those 218 Axis divisions from Russia.

Otherwise there will be a second front issue between the Western Allies and Russia that will far surpass that of last summer in bitterness and trouble-making possibilities. Such speculation, however, is borrowing trouble before it is due. The indications are strong that Joseph Stalin knows much more about American-British invasion plans than either the enemy or the Allied publics and also that he is satisfied.

Helen A. Randle Is Found Guilty Of Manslaughter

Jury Declines To Vote First Degree Murder Verdict at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 20 (AP) — A jury of twelve men tonight found Mrs. Helen Aileen Randle guilty of manslaughter in the death of Allen Willey, a 17-year-old High School boy.

The jury, which deliberated for about two and a quarter hours, found the third wife of a well-to-do sportsman innocent of murder, ignoring the plea of State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson that she be convicted of first degree murder.

The jury went out at 7:15 p. m. and returned with a verdict at 9:31 p. m.

Mrs. Randle heard their decision with no outward show of emotion.

Sentence Next Tuesday

The court immediately recessed until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Although Chief Judge Ridgely P. Melvin gave no indication in court when he would pronounce sentence, he later told newsmen he would sentence the wife of Ulmo S. Randle at 9:30 a. m. next Tuesday.

Under the Maryland criminal code, manslaughter conviction carries a prison term of from two to ten years, or a fine up to $500, or both.

The state's attorney, in his final argument to the jury, had asked that it return a first degree murder verdict, but he did not specifically mention the death verdict.

The defendant had testified she did not intentionally fire the shot which killed the Willey boy.

Mrs. Randle Breaks Down

Mrs. Randle, 31, broke down completely several times during her testimony, and tears coursed down her cheeks almost continuously as she declared she had only intended to frighten the 17-year-old high school boy from her Bay Ridge home.

The attractive brunette asserted that the bullets which caused Willey's death the next day and sent her wealthy husband, Ulmo S. Randle, 34, to a hospital with a leg wound, were fired during her husband's attempt to wrest from her the small calibre rifle she had obtained.

Mrs. Randle, third wife of the well-to-do horseman, testified that Willey was insolent and "called me the vilest names."

Testimony was completed and State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson began his closing argument to the jury of twelve men late today.

Mrs. Randle was asked to state specifically the names Willey had called her, and she broke down, sobbing:

"I can't, I can't."

Ordered from House

After a pause, she said her husband had ordered her from the house during a day-long domestic quarrel.

After Willey appeared, she said, he called her names and she went out and obtained the gun, returning to the living room where Willey, Randle and Mrs. Leonard R. Stinchcomb, Jr., chief prosecution witness, were seated on a divan.

Randle attempted to take the gun from her, she continued. She said it was "held loosely in my hand. I never intended to use the gun. I never brought it to my shoulder."

During the struggle, she said, the shots were fired. Mrs. Randle said the scuffle apparently resulted in the re-cocking of the rifle and the discharge of the second bullet.

Earlier, Mrs. Stinchcomb had said that Randle asserted his wife was "the naval academy prostitute" prior to their marriage, and that Willey seconded the reference, adding, "Mr. Randle, shall I get those pictures and show them to her?"

Mrs. Stinchcomb also told the jury the quarrel between the Randles began about 9 a. m. and that Mrs. Randle repeatedly called her husband various profane names.

Food Production Crisis Develops As Gas Runs Low

Thousands of Tractors Reported Idle Over a Wide Area

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—A crisis in food production has developed from Virginia northward through New England due to the shortage of gasoline, the War Food Administration reported today.

Thousands of tractors are standing idle in that area, the WFA said, "at a time when every day's delay means a reduction in yield."

Unless the situation is relieved soon, some of the land intended for crops this year will not be planted until next year, WFA said, adding that crop prospects are from one to two weeks late.

Reports from field offices, the WFA continued, indicate a complete lack of gasoline in Northern Virginia, the Delmarva peninsula (of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia), most of Maryland, and Long Island.

Field offices reported that the principal farm supplies in Eastern Pennsylvania and all of New York have exhausted their quotas and have made no deliveries of gasoline to farms for two or three days.

Plans for meeting the emergency were being discussed today by officials of the WFA, the Office War Petroleum Administration and the Office of Price Administration.

"Delay or failure to plant," the WFA statement said, "will most seriously affect vegetable production directly and, indirectionally, the production of poultry and dairy products through reduction of feed crops. Orchard sprayers and other power equipment are also affected by the lack of gasoline."

Lear Confirmed By Senate Vote

Yoo-Hoo Hoodoo Broken as He Becomes Lieutenant General

By FRANCIS J. KELLY

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The yoo-hoo hoodoo which had hung over Major General Ben Lear for nearly two years was lifted today when the Senate shouted approval of his promotion to the temporary grade of lieutenant general. Lear is acting chief of the army ground forces.

Senator Bennett Clark waged a determined but ineffective campaign to block confirmation of the officer who ordered a forced march for 350 soldiers because some of them yoo-hooed at a group of shorts-clad girl golfers near Memphis in the pre-war summer of 1941.

Clark's voice was the only one heard when the chair called for nays.

The Missouri senator declared Lear was unfit for promotion not only because of arbitrarily punishing innocent soldiers along with the culprits who yoo-hooed, but also because he had been "overbearing and insulting" in carrying out War department orders which resulted in breaking up some national guard divisions.

U. S. Delegate to Food Conferences Sees Rationing for Several Years

By OVID MARTIN

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 21 (AP)—A British declaration of support for an international policy of price stability raised talk at the united nations food conference today of a post-war, world-wide "ever-normal granary" system.

Richard K. Law, chairman of the British delegation, told a news conference that his country believed international action should be taken to eliminate wide fluctuations in prices of basis agricultural and on-agricultural products. Such fluctuations, he said, are in time equally ruinous to producers and consumers.

The ever-normal granary idea, calling for strong surplus crops, is aimed at assuring ample food supplies in years of short harvests as well as preventing price depressions when crop surpluses exist.

Belief that the world faces a post-war period of short food supplies was expressed by Paul H. Appleby, undersecretary of agriculture and an American delegate, who told a press conference he thought the United States should prepare to continue food rationing for several years after the war.

It will be necessary, he declared, to send huge amounts of food to Europe for some time after hostilities cease.

Law suggested no specific method of bringing about and maintaining price stability. However, United States agricultural experts brought to the conference reports on the experience of this country in stabilizing domestic farm prices through the AAA, with its "ever-normal granary" and commodity price-supporting loan features.

Draft Deferment To Be Stricter

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Paul K. Klaesius, adviser on occupational deferments of the state selective service boards, told all Maryland draft boards today to give closer scrutiny to requests for occupational deferment.

He also warned that the practice of contacting local boards directly to obtain longer deferments than time shown on employe replacement schedules should be stopped and that all such requests not approved by Klaesius' office should be forwarded to state headquarters.

In a bulletin to local draft boards, government appeal agents and appeal boards, he explained that selective service headquarters was "willing and ready to co-operate in every way," but re-emphasized that all questions relating to replacement schedules and extension of time must be taken up directly with state headquarters.

Colonel Klaesius also called attention of the local boards to the rule that attendance records of employes are required with requests for deferment and added that the boards "are again being directed to return all requests for deferment that do not show, whether or not an industry has submitted a replacement schedule."

An alert was sounded in London tonight for the fifth consecutive night—but the all clear sounded after an interval during which neither enemy planes nor gunfire were heard.

German planes dropped a few bombs in far-separated points in England last night and early today but damage was reported to be slight, and a small number of persons were injured.

In London last night and early today bombs were dropped at two places, but the raiders were driven off by intense gunfire before they could do any extensive damage.

The Grade Label Merry-Go-Round

THE OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION doesn't seem to be able to keep peace with itself. After all the disagreements and controversies within the administration about grade labeling of canned fruits and vegetables, it has changed front again. Having planned to require grade labeling of this year's pack, it now announces that these plans have been cancelled. Instead, it states, price maximums will be based on grades, dealer invoices will show the grades of the merchandise and "some method" will be provided consumers for ascertaining the grades. But canners will not have to print the grades on the label of the can itself.

OPA stated that at one time it was convinced that printing of the grades on canned goods would assist enforcement of price control but contended that the new plan "will secure in large part the same enforcement advantages as the marketing of the grade on the label."

What the "some method" of informing the consumer as to the grades of canned goods is to be is as yet a mystery, and the fact that it has not been made public gives suspicion that it is far-fetched and impracticable. Buying these goods "sight unseen" isn't very reassuring that some sort of juggling won't be going on.

The excuse advanced for the label ban is that producers have objected on the ground that the labor and expense involved would curtail production. But, the labels are printed and pasted on anyway. The thing looks screwy.

Re-education For Peace

DR. ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN, retiring president of the American Association for Adult Education, declares it is "childish arrogance" to assume that the United States should undertake the re-education of Germany after a United Nations victory.

It is with respect to any idea of lumping the job on Uncle Sam's shoulders in the role of a universal sucker, into which entirely too many blatherskites wish to place him again. But as a world job, maybe it isn't. Many thoughtful persons look at re-education of Germans as a prime necessity of any peace guaranty. In view of history and the awful destruction of two world wars for which those people are responsible, certainly the war bugs must be strained out of them, although it is a task that will take several generations to accomplish so inbred is their warlike spirit.

Dr. Meiklejohn, who spoke at a conference on adult education in New York, also said that Americans are a "pressure group" and that "we, too, need re-education in democracy." There is much to be said on that. This nation has gone a long way in the opposite direction in recent times. But, it is not altogether static in this respect. It has been undergoing an experience of some ten years' duration in which many lessons have been provided, and it is missing a good guess to hold that the American people are not going to profit from it.

The Greatest Post-War Threat

AT A RECENT MEETING of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Harold V. Coes, president of the society, in describing the "miracle of production by American industry to meet the needs of global warfare" said that the United States had produced in about two years what it took Japan thirty years to do, Russia twenty years, and Germany ten years.

This is an amazing record, yet here in America we take such achievements for granted. American industry is expected to produce what we need in peace or war and it can always be counted upon to fulfill its obligations.

In the year and a half since Pearl Harbor industry has not only met the fantastic production schedules called for by the government but in the process has found out how to save war material, war time, and war money. Material saved has been used for other important purposes. Time saved has enabled skilled workers to devote their efforts to other needed tasks. Money saved has been passed back to the government and to the people.

All of these savings made possible through the know-how of management and employees have enabled us to outproduce the Axis powers and to provide the fighting forces of the Allied nations with the world's finest fighting equipment.

While this American industrial know-how is now devoted entirely to war production problems, plans are under way to convert this "bottomless pit of industrial plenty" to the problems of peace when the war is over. And industry, mindful of its obligation to the millions of workers now in war plants and the returning soldiers and sailors, will be ready to provide them with the jobs they will need and the security for which they have so valiantly labored.

The main question about the future lies not in the ability of industry to fulfill its obligations but in the haze of uncertainty which surrounds the post-war plans of the government. As Frederick C. Crawford, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, has said, the uncertainty of the real attitude of the government toward private enterprise is "the greatest threat to prosperity in the post-war era."

Churchill and The Critics

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S ADDRESS TO CONGRESS was a strong and timely discussion of the war situation, but it doesn't seem to have cleared up a number of things about the war program.

True, Churchill reassured us that Great Britain will fight with the United States against Japan to the last ditch. He has given that assurance before, and everybody assumes that Britain will do its part in the end. But it is evident that Churchill still feels that the defeat of Hitler is of first importance and that the broad strategy already planned by the United Nations is of such nature that the program cannot now be changed.

Nevertheless, there remains a considerable body of opinion opposing the belief that with the defeat of Germany defeat of Japan would be inevitable. Here the fear is entertained that unless Japan is presently crippled and halted its utilization of the resources of the lands it has conquered will enable it to offer formidable, perhaps insuperable, opposition.

Another point which the prime minister left unanswered for the most part is the failure of Britain to utilize its forces in India and elsewhere in the Far East to clear the Burma road and thus enable aid to go through to China. There is no question that this is an important factor in keeping Japan down and preparing for its defeat whether that is prolonged or advanced. There was, of course, the intimation that shipping lack has played a part. At any rate, many would like to see more done by Britain in that theater to match Churchill's reassurances about defeating the Japs.

The speech and the resulting discussion have again impressed the fact that this global war is no mean undertaking, that much remains to be done, that the Japanese menace is serious and that something more must be done about that even though an effective tempo is being continued in blasting away at Germany and Italy.

A Union Proposal Of Little Import

REABSORPTION of the United Mine Workers of America in the American Federation of Labor as now proposed by John L. Lewis will not have much bearing in solving the labor union problem. It may serve some useful purpose in furthering amity between those two organizations, which were separated only a few months back by Lewis, but that is about all.

Now if Lewis had made a like step toward the CIO it would be of greater import. He took his miners out of that union, which he had organized, back in 1935 and a long and costly series of jurisdictional disputes has ensued, many of which have seriously hampered the defense and war programs.

The labor union problem goes farther than that, however, reaching to an ill-balanced policy of the national administration under unjust laws and regulations long calling for reform and a pusillanimous attitude of the administration in trying to administer them.

Tribute to the New Deal: Never before have so many done so little for so much.

The Iron Curtain

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Women are more clever at it than any man. . . . I've often admired the way they do it.

A young lady is talking to a young man. She is having a wonderful time. She is turning on the charm and slaying him with her moods and pretenses and gay understanding. Along comes another girl, just as pretty, just as dangerous—and what does that first girl do?

Marshall Maslin

If she can, she pulls down the iron curtain between that intruder and the other two. She smiles but she yanks down the curtain. Somehow she does it. Somehow she manages it without saying a word that you could put your fork through and describe as "a mean remark." That iron curtain is invisible but it is strong. It shuts you out perfectly. It has the magical power, too, of making you seem clumsy and rude and only half dressed. It is the greatest of all inventions because it never fails if you know how to pull it down.

There's that terrible iron curtain, but oddly enough the young man, poor idiot, doesn't know it's there. He continues to talk to the first charmer and includes the second one, too. He talks to her; he doesn't mind being surrounded by two such attractive young creatures. He'll do HIS best.

But the second young woman KNOWS! Never fear about that. She sees the iron curtain and if she is very clever too, she admires the wicked cleverness of the girl who pulled the invisible curtain down. She had done it, too. She knows how it's done without a change of expression or perhaps only an added brightness in the eyes or an increased gaiety in the smile. Girls know how but when a man tries it everybody knows he has failed. He looks sulky or defiant or his eyes flash or he sticks out his jaw. He gives his feelings away.

But the women perform the miracle with perfection and it's one of those things that men sometimes talk about when they are together—and never quite solve.

Chandler View Is Backed by Many, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 20—One has to know the background in which Prime Minister Churchill delivered his extraordinary address to Congress in order to understand its real meaning.

Mr. Churchill was plainly arguing a case. Against whom was he arguing? Against imaginary critics—against armchair strategists? He was, in fact, arguing against the viewpoint of some of the highest military and naval men in the United States. He was answering their conception of how the world war should be fought. And, in effect he was answering them in behalf of President Roosevelt, who either is somewhat neutral in the dispute or believes it better to have it handled in the open by the prime minister of Great Britain—a master of such debate.

A. B. Chandler

Unfortunately for the American people, they cannot know what our high military and naval men think. It is neither discreet nor traditional for military men to speak out when they think the political heads of the two Allied governments may make a wrong decision. The only alternative is for these military and naval men to be honest and candid when questions are asked them by members of Congress.

Outspoken Criticism

Thus, on Monday of this week Senator Chandler, of Kentucky, made a powerful speech which was a criticism of the Churchill concept of war strategy. Mr. Chandler is a 100 per cent supporter of the president on foreign policy and on military measures and preparedness appropriations before and after Pearl Harbor. He is a member of the all-important Military Affairs committee. He is a veteran of the last war. It may be presumed that he has made a study of our war strategy and has had access to the thinking of our military men. In his speech he made this significant statement:

> "I may be permitted to say that for this speech I received much more encouragement from those from whom I wanted to have encouragement, and I spoken to the Senate today not only my own feelings but the feelings of quite a number of military and naval men in the United States who think that the course I have suggested is the right course to pursue."

Mr. Chandler then proceeded to point out how the war against Japan was being made a secondary affair. In another portion of his speech, he said:

Officers Likewise Anxious

> "I have a feeling that the great majority of the high-ranking army and navy officers, who, after all, must fight this war and must die for their country if the occasion comes, would like to do what I am urging, if our commander-in-chief and Mr. Churchill would arrange for them to do it."

Now what were Mr. Chandler's points? He declared that the British have 2,000,000 men in India available for action against the 60,000 Japanese in Burma, that the only way to acquire air bases in China from which to bomb Japan is to open the Burma road.

"The British have had in India ten soldiers for every one the Japanese have had in Burma," he added, "but so little energy has been put into the campaign that the British army is back where it started on the border of India, and the same weary lack of spirit has been exhibited in the building of air fields from which airplanes can take off to keep open a faint line to our gallant and isolated ally, China."

Mr. Churchill's answer in his speech was that he had brought Gen. Wavell and other commanders from the Indian area to Washington to discuss the situation. He said the problem was wrapped up in the "science of logistics." This means shipping and, as pointed out in these dispatches before Mr. Churchill came here, the question of allocating tonnage is the vital point of the whole business.

Big Shipping Problems

How much shipping shall be used to maintain the civilian economy of Great Britain? How much shipping shall be used to keep on supplying troops that apparently are not to be used to make an invasion of the continent of Europe this year? And if an air war is to be tried out in Europe as a means of forcing Germany to collapse by a process of attrition, what possible objection can there be to sending a major portion of the British fleet to the Bay of Bengal to co-operate with large air and sea and land operations involving the reconquest of Burma and the opening of the Burma road so as to supply the airbases we need to bomb Japan?

Mr. Churchill's words are reassuring. He has spoken eloquently of British purpose to help after Hitler is beaten. But American military and naval men whose viewpoint was reflected by Senator Chandler are impatient for a large-scale offensive from all sides against Japan. The prayers of every American should be directed toward divine guidance for the commander-in-chief of the American Army and Navy in making his own decision at this moment undeterred by the political interests of any other statesman or any other country—a decision that may enable us to shorten the war and bring both Japan and Germany to unconditional surrender virtually at the same time.

A Destructive Movement

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Elsewhere in this issue appears a discussion of the so-called Kilgore Scientific and Technical Mobilization bill, written by the chairman of of national association of Manufacturers. That is, the administration on patents.

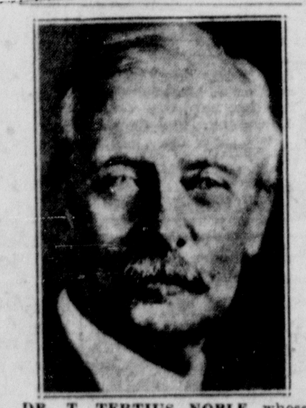

The essence of the NAM complaint is that the Kilgore proposal would result in "socialization of research" and thus destroy "free competition and the profit motive."

In this connection another development involving patents calls for thoughtful public consideration. That is, the administration of seized foreign patents by the alien property custodian. This official has taken over to date 25,000 German-owned patents, 15,000 patents of nationals of enemy-occupied countries and some 5,500 applications for patents made by foreigners. The government, through the alien property custodian, is granting non-exclusive, royalty-free licenses for use of these patents for the duration of the war and a period of six months thereafter for the nominal fee of $50.

The effect of this action is to nationalize these patents. The effect of the general governmental assault on the patent system until recently conducted by Thurman Arnold, is to bring the whole patent system into disrepute. And the effect of the Kilgore bill, if the NAM has correctly interpreted it, would be to put the seal of congressional sanction on the destruction of the individual's property rights in the fruit of his inventive genius, research or labor.

In our judgment, the whole movement is destructive. We do not see how it can do other than stifle the urge to seek out new products and new processes, new instruments to aid the hand of man. For once destroy the incentive of personal gain and the urge to invent languishes. Make no mistake about that.

IT'S GOING TO TAKE A LOT OF COUPONS!

Assurances by Churchill Fail To Settle Qualms about Burma Line, Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 20—Churchill's broad explanation of Allied strategy did not entirely satisfy complainants in Congress.

Winston Churchill

What the fairly wide group behind Senator Chandler's viewpoint has been trying to do is to induce the British to put a formidable army in against Japan on the Burma line. They also wanted to draw out officially a British promise of full co-operation in running down the Mikado.

Official quarters here have been disturbed for some months by Mr. Churchill's promise to demobilize some of the British military forces after we get Hitler, a speech which Anthony Eden tried to explain away unsuccessfully when he was in Washington.

The new Churchill pronouncements stilled these fears successfully, but left the Burma line proposal unsettled. He is up against a difficult proposition there.

The Australian Parliament recently extended the limit to which their draftees could fight. It now runs up almost to the equator in some areas where hitherto draftees could not even be sent off the Australian mainland (their volunteers go anywhere).

Million in Indian Army

The Indian army runs nearly a million men, but most of these have been kept at home for protection against the Indians embarked on anti-British crusades, passive but occasionally bloody.

This Indian army could be put into the field if Gandhi, et al, would quiet down at home, and if adequate British officer leadership was furnished them. However, a large sea expeditionary force would have to be organized.

The driblet army which the British pushed through the high mountains on the Burma border and into the jungle has been driven back almost to the border and is too weak to do anything.

The congressional critics really believe China will collapse and fall out of the war unless the Burma road is opened. A more general and equally authentic opinion in Washington still is that the Chinese may remain too weak to do anything under existing circumstances, but well be able to plod along until the Roosevelt-Churchill strategy contemplates crushing the Japs (increased aviation help is apparently forthcoming, as Churchill implied).

Killed by Politics

Politics beat the Rumi plan — administration politics. Mr. Roosevelt's threat of a veto may have carried some weight, but the House Democrats were simply determined not to let the Republicans get any more credit than necessary for having pushed tax easement.

Leader Joe Martin, who made the Rumi plan Republican by adoption, picked up plenty of political hay on the proposition. One worker constituent in his district wrote significantly that he would save $56 of back debt to the government, and did not care what Henry Ford saved. A leading Democrat came up to Martin and told him the local Democratic club in his city had been discussing the Rumi plan, and one of the local leaders said:

> "This fellow Martin is like the Roosevelt of ten years ago. He wants to give us something."

The Democrats tried to make out that the plan favored the rich, and succeeded in smearing any common popular intelligent understanding of the complex situation.

War Salaries Hit Worst

The truth is the plan would have raised less taxes than now from the man whose income is declining (not many of them); more taxes from the man whole income is increasing (the bulk of war salaries); and do nothing for the man whose income has been the same the past two years—until he dies or his income does increase or decline. Then his back tax debt would be wiped out.

In some few isolated instances, a rich man would have been helped (Senator Byrd mentioned these in the debate) above the poor man but not in any general way.

The truth remains that the Rumi plan was the only one proposed to put the country on pay-as-you-go without requiring some measure of double taxation for the current year.

Any compromise, therefore, is not likely to be effective. The man with a income of $100,000 (cited by the president) now pays around $70,000 in federal income tax, and a state tax in addition. He obviously cannot pay much if any additional taxes on his earnings. To him, any compromise would be a capital levy.

A Fresh Breeze

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

The American people have at least one friend in the national capital. He is William M. Jeffers, the rubber director, who stands out among the bureaucrats like a lighthouse in the inky blackness of a stormy night.

Last week before a Senate committee Mr. Jeffers made some statements that will gladden the hearts of all freedom lovers. He could not, he said, go along with "some in the OPA" and elsewhere who would restrict civilians to the barest necessities. Then he added: "When it gets to the idea of forcing unnecessary restrictions on the American people, you want to get a new boy, because I'm not going to do that job." The army, he said, "Isn't just the men in uniform," but also 30,000,000 Americans supplying the armed forces.

Those remarks of Mr. Jeffers should be printed in letters a mile high, so that other federal agencies can read them. They are a refreshing breeze blowing from a source region of narrow, stagnant ideas, which hold that the government and its schemes come first, and the public can get along on the scraps. No wonder Mr. Jeffers wants to get out of Washington when he finishes his present job. He must find the atmosphere depressing.

New War Setup Gives Precedence To Aviation Wing

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

The "AAFSAT" is just beginning to be referred to in the news columns. Without loss of time we may as well begin trying to learn what institution this particular collection of initials stands for.

Charles P. Stewart

Initialization is an editor's way of compacting the troublesomely long names of many of our governmental, commercial and other large organizations into short space for convenience in headwriting and reading. The system has reached a point where it verges on abbreviating the Christian religion as the "CR," leaving the reader to guess what is being mentioned.

Many of these contractions gradually have become adequately recognized. In the course of years we have grown to accept the "GAR" as meaning the Grand Army of the Republic, the AFofL as meaning the American Federation of Labor, the "CIO" as signifying the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and today nobody needs to be told that that the "UMW" stands for the United Mine Workers of America.

Hits Cuckoo Stage

It is like the initials "BC"—Before Christ. We are so accustomed to such initializations that we pretty nearly understand them better than we do the full names that they are representative of. Of late, though, initialization has gone cuckoo.

The war developed it up to the nth power.

Creation of government commissions, administrations and offices progressed at such a rate that initialized, you can't keep track of them—the difference between the "OPA," the "OWI," the "MPC" and oodles more of them.

For instance, the other day I encountered half a column of journalistic comment relative to the activities of the "SSB" "OA&SI."

"SSB" (Social Security Board) was clear enough, but the "&" in the sub setup puzzled me into an investigation, revealing that the latter is the "SSE's" old age and survivors insurance bureau. Leaving the "B," for bureau off from the "OA&&SI" was what confused me.

Now for the "AAFSAT." It seems that this translates into the Army Air Forces School of Applied Tactics.

We have had an Army and a Navy department, pretty independent of one another. Their functions did not automatically mix to any extent. Now they do mix. Aviation mixed them.

Merger the Object

In fact, it has become somewhat predominant over either or both of them. Well, the "AAFSAT's" function is to effect a merger. With Aviation in a majority of the three.

Before this year got fairly started aviation was considered an army and a navy adjunct—each. To date it is reckoned that THEY are aviation branches, with the flying command as the main thing.

They are due to be subordinated to it as a couple of collateral arms.

Combining them on that basis is rather difficult, however, that is the purpose of the "AAFSAT." It is to be done, to a certain extent, by degrees.

Navy Is Rebuilding

Nevertheless, it is agreed by experts that the business of war is transformed. The navy already is being rebuilt. It is to consist of transportation craft—plane carriers largely. Land fighters are to be available for the occupancy of terrain already under control from overhead.

The idea is that we need, not two or three departments but a single department of the whole thing. The "AAFSAT" is to be it.

Brig. Gen. Hume Peabody summarizes: "Sea, air and ground coordination—of the over-air command."

In short, the "AAFSAT" is to be a new department, Army and navy cabinetships are to snuff out—gradually. They are to become mere undersecretaryships.

The War department will be one unit, with the aviatorial boss as supreme chief.

Pennsylvania Makes Flags

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

It is fitting that Pennsylvania, birth place of "Old Glory," should lead in the nation the manufacture of flags. The state department of Commerce says sixty per cent of the output in the country is turned out of here.

It is worthy of note also that one of the manufacturers, at Oaks, Montgomery county, is the oldest in the United States. War has greatly speeded its production, which is now four times that of pre-Pearl Harbor days.

The government is a large purchaser. Flags cost it millions of dollars. They have come a long way since the widowed seamstress Betsy Ross made the first one in Philadelphia in 1777.

Sergeant Will Have Different Advice

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., (AP) — If a certain youth due to be inducted soon has a hard time as a soldier, he can blame it on judicial advice. The youth was brought before City Judge Martin Fleming, charged with cursing and auxiliary policeman who cautioned him against crossing against a traffic light.

Judge Fleming freed him, but told him:

"Now you be sure and curse your sergeant when you get in the Army."

"Yes sir!" the youth responded enthusiastically as he left.

Local Girl Will Receive Degree at Vassar June 6

Miss Ann Smith Is Member of Senior Class and Active on Campus

Miss Ann Blakeslea Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fulcher P. Smith, Cumberland, is a member of the senior class at Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., which will hold its seventy-eighth commencement Sunday, June 6.

Miss Smith's major field of study is zoology. In addition to her academic work she has been studying typing and home nursing this year under the war council's program to prepare all students for some form of war service. She is also a member of the Science and Swupper Clubs. Named to the varsity swimming team last year, Miss Smith is college manager of swimming tnis year.

This year's commencement will be the last June graduation ceremony at Vassar until 1945 when the present freshman class will graduate. Under the three-year course adopted as a wartime measure in order to train students more quickly for service in war and reconstruction work, the present juniors will complete their college education next April and the sophomores in December 1944. The June event this year will be brief and simple for, at the request of the senior class, the traditional three-day commencement program will again be condensed into twenty-four hours as it was last year.

Class day exercises will be Saturday afternoon, June 5, after which President and Mrs. Henry Noble MacCracken will hold an informal reception for the seniors, their families, and guests. A buffet supper will be served in the floral Circle. In the evening the dramatic society will present "Alice in Wonderland" in the Outdoor theater.

President MacCracken will deliver the commencement address and confer the academic degrees on Sunday morning in the Chapel.

Poppy Sale Will Be Held Here on Saturday, May 29

Poppies in tribute to America's soldiers who died in the present conflict, as well as those who fell among the popies in France and Belgium twenty-five years ago, will be worn in Cumberland May 29, Mrs. George Banzhof, president of Fort Cumberland Unit No. 13 of the American Legion Auxiliary announces.

"Wearing the poppy is a personal pledge that we will not break faith with those who died, but will carry on to the achievement of the things for which they gave their lives," Mrs. David Allen unit poppy chairman, said yesterday, and a poppy over every heart is the goal.

The money contributed for the flowers will be used for the rehabilitation and child welfare funds of the American Legion and Auxiliary, to support the disabled soldiers of both wars and the children of the dead or disabled.

The flowers, made of crepe paper in replica of the wild Flanders poppy, have been ordered from the hospitals where disabled veterans make them under the direction of the Maryland department of the auxiliary. Making the poppies has kept the men busy during the winter and spring and aided in their rehabilitation.

Menace of "Other Woman" Should be Treated as Joke

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Copyright, 1943, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Perhaps there has never been a marriage—no matter how happy—in which the spectre of the "OTHER WOMAN" hasn't at times raised a worrisome head.

The girl who marries a handsome man has her troubles cut out for her. Handsome Harry is fair game for every woman. If she's young, "Himself" (as the beloved Irish call the husband) makes an impressive addition to the scalps dangling at her belt. If she's not so young—old, older, oldest — she may take a purely aesthetic interest in his good looks, also there may be something about him that reminds her of the man she didn't marry.

May Be Only Spectral

Often the other woman is purely spectral—a figment of wifely imagination. Again, she may be slightly more corporeal — the platonic friend "Himself" just talks to and thinks good for his soul. If the Little Woman is wise she won't break up this high dilution comradeship. For when there is a wifely uprising on the Home Front, because of the platonic pal—where things never go deeper than a fervid clutch of the hand—"Himself" may bolt the traces and decide to have the game as well as the name.

Platonic affairs seldom run a fever temperature, and many a foolishly jealous wife raising Cain over them, drives "Himself" from the temperate into the torrid zone of some waiting siren.

The third "Other Woman" menace is where "Himself" is really caught, literally hand and foot, even as a fly on fly-paper. Then must the Little Woman summon all her intelligence to avoid applying wrong remedies — fears, nagging, complaints about stinginess, threats to go home to mother.

Treat Her as a Joke

All these bad medicines have only the effect of driving "Himself" to the waiting siren's arms. That lady is too smooth to nag, cry, complain of stinginess (likely she's no cause for that). As for the threat of going home to mother, it may seem a solution to the distraught male, trying to hold a course 'twixt Scylla and Charybdis.

No, there is only one way to deal with the Other Woman menace—treat her as a joke. If there are several of them, think them as a whole posse of jokes. Let them pass into the annals of family pleasantries. Finesse, tact and a gossamar hand will be required in dealing with this situation. If the Little Woman has any hurt feelings, they must never be shown. She should greet "Himself" when he returns from Elysium Fields, with smiles and when any hint of the Other Woman arises, say something like: "What can you expect, Darling, with that kind of downright Apollo beauty you have?"

The fact that he's come home to the Little Woman is what she should regard as the most important thing.

Point Rationing Problems

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day I read in one of the newspapers that persons directly responsible for the point rationing system were all bridge addicts. They played bridge, bridge and more bridge, and evolved this plan. So-o-o, like Minerva from Jove's head, sprang the rationing which has caused the suicide of one grocer, driven others out of business and set housewives frantic.

It's scant comfort to realize that the bridge addicts who put this thing over on us got their inspiration from a deck of cards. History relates that cards were developed to amuse an insane King of France. History doesn't state whether cards cured the royal madman or not, but this bridge inspiration seems to be putting a good many worthy citizens in the crazy King's class.

RAGING HOUSEWIFE.

As we don't know whether it would be regarded as less majeste to comment on the inspiration of running the National stomach on Bridge points, we leave this question to our readers.

Correspondent Answers

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I couldn't resist the temptation to write, hoping my letter will be printed so that "Peter's Mother" will see it.

I have a five-months old son, and my husband is in the Army. We are fortunate because he is still in the United States. I am unhappy without him, but there are millions of girls who every day wonder where their husbands are and whether they are safe. There are men who have never seen their babies and some who never will. This war-torn world is seeing more misery than we could imagine.

There are very few girls today who wouldn't give their right arms to be in the shoes of "Peter's Mother." She has everything they dream of after this world is at peace, if they are lucky enough to have their husbands come home at all.

So when she's feeling lonesome, I hope "Peter's Mother" will look around and see what loneliness really is. If she wants something to do, try Red Cross work, and realize there is a war.

R.A.

"Peter's Mother" who wrote to this column some weeks ago, was a young wife, fond of athletics and the out-of-doors, who found housekeeping and baby-tending not only a trifle monotonous but the daily round left too much time on her hands.

Question of Loyalty

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I work to maintain a home for my mother. She has no relatives or anyone with whom she could live. My husband is in service, but his pay is not enough to support us.

My problem is, shall I go with him (his division is a long distance from home) or stay and maintain a home here, where my mother can be comfortable? I feel that he needs me, but if I went with him, I would have to place mother in a Home. This I hesitate doing, as she is aged and I'm afraid wouldn't get the proper attention. I want to do the right thing. Will you advise me, please?

WORRIED.

You have my sympathy in trying to decide this grave question. After you were to break up your home and join your husband, he might, in all likelihood, be sent overseas.

On the other hand, there is the question of your mother's maintenance.

A young wife faced with a problem similar to yours wrote me that she had placed her mother in a home temporarily, while she paid a visit to her husband stationed at a distant post. She expected to resume housekeeping with her mother when she returned.

In any case, it would seem wise to take a war industry job.

Firm and Kindly Mother Is Best, Dr. Myers Says

Protective Measures Should Remain in Effect for the Duration

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

What the United States of America needs now, if our heroes are to return after victory to a community fit to honor their sacrifices, are parents with spines, to replace the millions of mothers who now act like jelly fishes.

Occasionally, at a gathering of parents somewhere in the United States, or through a letter from some reader, I learn of a rare mother who really has a backbone, who puts the physical and moral welfare of her children and the citizenship of her community first, and guides her growing child accordingly.

Suppose you are such a mother, who, having begun when your child began to move about under his own steam, trained him effectively in the meaning of NO, in an atmosphere of family love and understanding, and were able to do so with a minimum of pain and annoyance to him.

Child Is Self-Reliant

Suppose you at the same time cultivated self-reliance and responsibility in your child so that you have been able, gradually, to reduce outward controls, but never too fast for his moral and physical safety. Suppose your child is now twelve years old, and that from the time he first went out of doors to play, he always has brought himself into the house as soon as the street lights appeared, even though all his playmates have roamed about as they pleased long after dark. But the chances are that some of the parents of your child's playmates are already imitating you. Indeed, some of their children may often be in your home after dark with your child, having wholesome good times there.

Even so, your child may have complained at times over your restrictions. Yet you did not argue with him. You merely said once, "It is none of my business what other parents do. This is our way," and you had the character to make your word good.

Suppose your child were fourteen and that you did not wish him or her to go out at night with one of the opposite sex unaccompanied by an adult. You would, I hope, let him be with companions of the opposite sex often at your home or in another approved place reasonably often, preferably with lots of other boys and girls together, but with adults present, not to watch them but to provide a safe atmosphere for them.

Should your boy of 12 or 13 want to go to a movie with a girl at night, readily go with them then. You might not insist they sit with you. In case you drive, several young couples might well go with you, with their parents' approval. Most of all, make your home a place where lots of boys and girls of any ages gather for good times. Be there yourself then.

Let me suggest that you hold to such protective measures until your boy is at least sixteen and your daughter fifteen, certainly for the duration. If you could enlist the cooperation of a number of other mothers, it might not be long before you would have helped establish a wholesome standard for your community.

Solving Parent Problems

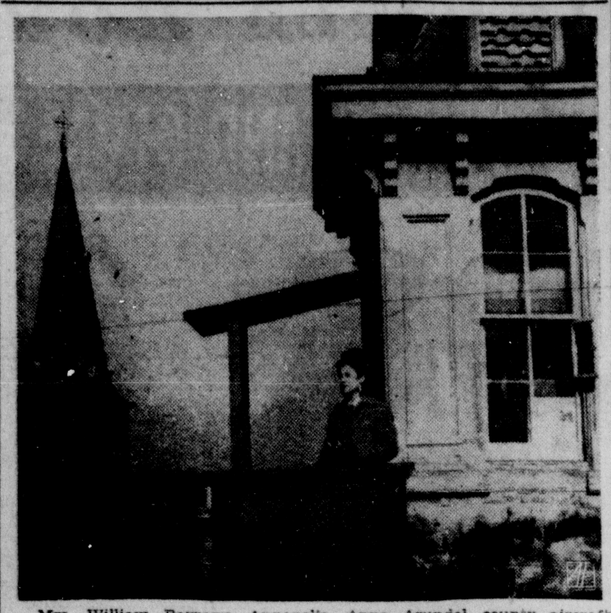

Q. Will it harm a child after entering school to have learned at play before entering school to recognize the letters of the alphabet?

A. Of course not; it will help him. Don't let any one fool you on that point. It wouldn't even harm the first and second grade child, in his spelling, to "know his letters."

Q. What is a wise understanding with grandparents when living with young parents or vice-versa?

A. That they need take no responsibility for the children whatsoever unless requested to do so.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

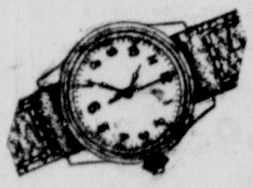

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Reports Are Made on Activities Of Organizations in McCoole

Many Improvements Result from Efforts of Volunteer Firemen

MCCOOLE, May 20—Miss Jane Botsford spoke on "What the Public Schools Have Done to Further the War Effort", at a meeting of the McCoole P-T.A. Association recently, in which the various organizations in McCoole participated.

Brooke Duckworth gave a report on the activities of the civilian defense organization and Mrs. Charles Llewellyn noted the achievements of the Homemakers club. Miss Hazel Mae Steiding, leader of the Girls 4-H club demonstrated how old clothing may be made useful. Paul Kesecker reported on the activities of the Boys 4-H club work under the leadership of Charles Llewellyn.

Mrs. James H. Clark, representing the McCoole Volunteer Fire Company submitted a report on the work the company has done in the past two years.

Improvement Made

Mrs. Clark pointed out that the fire company, which was organized about five years ago, has made several improvements including street lights for certain sections of the town which the fire company is now paying for. Many streets have been repaired and the county commissioners have promised that further improvements will be made in the near future.

Equipment has been purchased for fighting fires and protecting life. A new modern heating unit has been installed and the building is being covered with insulated brick shingles. Painting will be done in the interior of the building and the exterior trimmed. This work will be completed within the next month at which time the building which houses the fire company will be one of the most modern in the county.

During the past year the firemen met all obligations and maintain an adequate cash balance. The company has also taken a keen interest in civilian defense work and has been instrumental in making it a sound and efficient organization.

The entire membership of thirty-nine men has just completed an advanced course in the study of fire-fighting and fire protection given by the University of Maryland. During the study several local buildings were inspected and all fire hazards which were found have been eliminated. The insurance commissioner has been contacted relative to having insurance rates in McCoole reduced.

Seven in Service

On Nov. 1, 1942, with the assistance of the Ladies Auxiliary, a service flag dedication was held in tribute to the men of McCoole, who are serving in the armed forces. At that time thirty-nine young men of the community were in the service. Seven active members of the Fire department are now in the armed forces.

The report commended the faculty of McCoole elementary school on the splendid work it is doing and the co-operation given the firemen.

TWIN COLTS MAKE QUICK DEBUT

Rationing in Wartime Has Shown Up Food Faddist, Dr. Clendening Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

War is a realist. In the face of its cold, factual start affectations and eccentricies fade away. Since I have lived through the last six months of rationing, I have learned never to believe a food faddist again. There are only two kinds—plain liars and gaudy liars.

Take the vegetarians. They would never touch meat. Man's digestive system was never made for meat. Beside meat is a poison, according to them. It brings on rheumatism, dimness of vision, lumbago, Bright's disease, high blood pressure. Give them the wholesome vegetables and fruits of the earth. Nuts—nuts contain all the food elements. Let us live on nuts.

Well, to say the least, they have not made many converts to judge from the wail of agony that went up the last week in March when the country discovered it couldn't get but just a little meat. I saw one vegetarian—I will admit he has been a partial vegetarian; he was more of a preaching than a practicing vegetarian, but still a vegetarian—I saw him during that fateful last week of March, staggering from a butcher store, both arms clutched around enormous bundles, from the wrapped ends of which protruded what was unmistakably meat, his eyes bugged out with a fierce resolve to get his prizes home and in the icebox before someone beat him to it.

Experiences with Coffee

The coffee prohibition crank too. The male, or more often female, who did not believe in stimulants in any form. Their preachments got drowned out in the wail that went up when we began to get only one cup of coffee a day.

I will say this about the coffee faddist. I believe from experience since last November that the pleasures of coffee are largely gustatory and olfactory. There is a kind of coffee made of roasted barley that has been just as satisfactory to me as the real thing.

Even this is directly contradictory to the faddist's idea that coffee is habit-forming. I broke off without a qualm or a quiver. Nor have I noticed that I have slept any better since quitting coffee. But it must be admitted that there is one who is well acquainted with my habits who avers that I couldn't have slept any better than I did before, because my sleeping is calculated to make the seven gentlemen at Ephesus look like amateurs.

Man Carnivorous

The real facts about the food fads I have mentioned are that man's digestive tract is admirably adapted to meat eating, and that coffee is one of the best things a person from the age of 30 on can possibly use.

If a well-informed anatomist on Mars should fall heir to a human body for dissection, he would undoubtedly conclude that this was the structure of a carnivorous animal. The herbivorous animals, such as the rabbit, or cow, have an enormous length of intestine which is necessary for them to have enough absorptive surface to utilize their uneconomical type of food. This has shrunk in man to the little vermiform appendix.

And coffee increases the circulation of the blood through the heart and kidneys and brain, which is a help to those organs when they get to be over 50 years of age.

Questions and Answers

D. V.: What is meant by the term "heart murmur"? What is it caused by and is it dangerous in a 14-year-old child?

Answer: Heart murmurs in most instances are caused by defects in the valves of the heart so that the stream of blood either goes the wrong way or is obstructed in its flow. People go a great many years with a heart murmur without discomfort or serious impairment of their health.

P. E. K.:—What brings on a cystic ovary? Does it grow larger? Would medical treatment in a hospital take care of this?

Answer: A cystic ovary is a form of new growth. It tends always to get larger. Sometimes they reach enormous sizes. Medical treatment is of no avail. It is one of the triumphs of modern life that surgery is safe and effective in these cases.

F. G.:—I would like your opinion about low blood pressure, accompanied by slow and irregular pulse. Do you consider this serious?

Answer: I do not consider low blood pressure itself serious, but what you say about the irregular pulse gives another aspect to the question nd perhaps indicates that you should consult a physician.

POUNDING HEADACHES—JANGLED NERVOUSNESS GIVEN RELIEF

Once Again the Famous World's Tonic Proves Its Laxative Merit and Makes Another Friend

Mr. Jerry Hawks, House 65, Mabscott, near Beckley, W. Va., a New River Coal Co. loader, is quoted by his wife, as follows:

'A variety of ailments developed, because of occasional constipation, and I became subject to frequent dizzy spells. I have to work hard for my living and cannot afford any fancy or high priced medicines or treatments. I began to have attacks of pounding headaches and in time nervousness was making me jumpy and irritable. So many Mabscott and Beckley people were using World's Tonic, and they all spoke so highly of it that I decided to give it a trial.

"This splendid medicine relieved my constipation and its ensuing ailments in such a manner that I can hardly find words to express my gratitude. I recommend it to all friends and will always use it if those headaches, dizzy spells or other such ailments return. Since taking World's Tonic none of these ills have bothered me."

The intestinal tract may be affected with poisonous waste matters accumulated by delayed elimination. Constipation is the beginning of many of these poisonous wastes and World's Tonic relieves constipation gently but effectively. Thus, an ounce of prevention, and you may not need that pound of cure.

One Shot Sets Mood of Drama

It isn't often that one scene conveys to a movie audience the tone of a picture, the emotions of its players and the basic reason for the screenplay itself. There is such a scene in the Jean Renoir-Dudley Nichols production, "The Land Is Mine," at the Liberty. It comes early in the picture.

You see flashes of a half-deserted town, but there are people behind their windows. Then the public square-faced by the town hall begins to fill with Nazi soldiers. Foot troops swing into place, trucks rumble across the pavement, small tanks line up until presently there is a sea of German soldiers awaiting the arrival of their commander. A staff car races across the square and grinds to a halt in front of the entrance to the Town Hall. The Mayor of the city and his aides stand on the steps to receive the Nazi Major. The Major, Walter Slezak, struts into the scene, his stiff arm held tightly against his side. Greetings are exchanged and the small group moves inside the building.

Meanwhile you see faces peeping from behind curtained windows, the few pedestrians on the streets scurry through doors and the only people left outside are Nazi soldiers.

Starrett Plays Lead In Western Film

Charles Starrett, currently starred at the Embassy Theatre in Columbia's action-jammed outdoor adventure yarn, "The Fighting Buckaroo," is the only western star on the screen who was born east of the Mississippi. His birthplace is Athoi, Massachusetts.

Showing on the same program "After Midnight With Boston Blackie" with Chester Morris and Ann Savage offers entertainment for young and old.

Jean Ruth Stars In Maryland Film

Like millions of other girls, Jean Ruth is "crazy about a uniform." And the uniforms are equally mad for Jean. They should be. When a girl rises at 4:30 every morning to bring the soldier boys jive entertainment—via radio—so they can get up easier, she's something.

Jean's penchant for bringing early-morning cheer to Johnnie Doughboy has paid off, too, not only in popularity for her, but in a full fledged movie. Her popular radio program, "Reveille With Beverly," is now the basis of Columbia's swing-packed picture of the same name now at the Maryland Theatre, in which round-eyed limber-legged Ann Miller does a screen version of Jean.

When Jean went to Hollywood to talk over the new Columbia picture with the studio, boys in Southern California army camps heard about it, and she got such stacks of fan mail asking her to broadcast from the Coast that, before she knew it, she was doing her program on the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Phillies Take Two More Games From Lowly Cubs

Double Triumph Leaves Team Half Game Behind Third Place Cards

PHILADELPHIA, May 20 (AP)—Those rambunctious "New Deal" Phillies ran their winning streak to five straight today by handing the Chicago Cubs a pair of shutouts, 3 to 0 and 2 to 0, in a doubleheader before 3,249 at Shibe Park.

The double triumph, coupled with Brooklyn's win over St. Louis, put the fourth place Phils only half a game behind the third place Cardinals. It also gave the Phils a clean sweep of the four-game series with the Cubs, who now have dropped nine in a row.

Four-hit pitching by both Charley Fuchs and Southpaw Al Gerheauser, backed by opportune hitting and good fielding, was the spark that enabled the Phils to chalk up their longest winning streak in seven years. Back in August, 1936, they managed to win six straight.

Fuchs, who was beaten in three previous outings, outpointed big Bill Lee in the opener to win his first game of the campaign. He allowed only two Cubs to reach second.

Meantime the Phils got a run in the second on Early Naylor's walk and Merrill May's two bagger. In the sixth Danny Litwhiler doubled, reached third on Jim Wasdell's infield single and scored as Babe Dahlgren hit into a double play. In the seventh Fuchs was safe on an error. He stole second, took third on Danny Murtaugh's single

Story of a Boy Who Went to War

Billy Southworth said that one day late in the season of 1940 he was in Philadelphia with the Cardinals and his son dropped in to see him. The boy, also called Billy, was an outfielder with the Toronto club.

"He had a day off in Newark or Jersey City and there was something he wanted to see me about," Billy said. "It didn't take him long to get to the point: this country was going to get into the war sooner or later and he wanted to enlist in the Army."

Young Billy was 23 years old. He had attended Ohio State University for three years and then had set out as a ball player. In another year or two, the way he was going, he would be in the big leagues. The 1940 season still had a month or so to go and here he was talking about enlisting in the Army. He'd been thinking about it for some time. That was a cinch.

"I said to him: 'Bill, you're in a pennant race now. Until it's over, keep your mind on it. You can't play good ball and think about something else at the same time.'

"And he said: 'I know it, Dad. My mind is on baseball — well, most of the time, anyway. But I know what's coming and I want to be in on it. I want to get into it my way, too. They'll have this selective service working pretty soon and if I wait for that, I'll have to go where they send me. I won't be able to pick my branch of the service.'

"He didn't have to tell me what that branch would be. Ever since he was a small boy, our home in Columbus had been cluttered up with aviation magazines and pictures and there was a work bench in the cellar where he made model planes. I knew, when he went to college, that he planned to prepare himself there for a career in aviation when he got through playing ball. I didn't say anything about that at the time, though. I just said:

" 'Well, Bill, let's get this baseball season over. We can talk about it when we get home.'

One Night Before a Fireplace

"Of course, he was old enough to enlist without my consent, but he wouldn't do that. He and I always have been very close and he wanted my advice . . . and he didn't want to do anything that might hurt me. He didn't say anything more until the first of December. We were sitting in front of the fireplace — just the two of us, because my little daughter Carol was just getting over whooping cough and Mrs. Southworth was upstairs with her — and he said:

" 'Dad, I know you have been thinking — as I have — about me going into the Army.'

" 'Yes,' I said, 'I have. But why don't you wait awhile? We're not in this war yet. Maybe we won't get into it for another year or so. By that time you may be in the major leagues — and that would be something to come home to when the war is over.'

"He was a good hitter," Bill said, "and he was fast and he sure could go and get the ball in the outfield. But he shook his head.

" 'That can wait,' he said. 'I don't think this can. I think maybe you've been looking at this a little selfishly, Dad.'

"And I said: 'Maybe I have, Bill. But you're my son — my only son. And if I've been selfish, I've been selfish for you. I just want you to have the best of everything.'

"He didn't say anything for a minute and then he said:

" 'Dad, if you were 23 years old . . . and a war was coming on... well, I know you'd want to be in it ...Which branch of the service do you think you'd like to be in?'

"Well, there it was. I said — what else could I say? I said:

" 'Why, son, aviation, I guess.'

"He was quiet again for a while and then he said:

" 'Well, it's eleven o'clock. I guess I'll go to bed, Dad.'

"He went upstairs and I sat there by the fire alone. I sat there looking at those logs burn down until they were just embers . . .and then I got up and put the lights out . . . and went to bed.

He'd Never Know a Finer Day

"In the morning I said to my wife:

" 'Let's have a special breakfast this morning. We'll all eat together and we'll have something a little different.'

"We went downstairs and I went into the kitchen to help — I'm not such a poor hand around a kitchen, especially when it comes to getting breakfast — and then Carol, who was feeling much better, came down.

" 'Go up and call your brother,' I said. 'We're having a special breakfast this morning.'

"We did, too. Fruit and cereal and eggs and bacon and sausages and muffins. It was a beautiful morning. There was snow on the ground, but the sky was blue and the dining room was filled with sunshine. And as we were finishing, I said to Billy:

" 'Son, I did a lot of thinking after you went to bed last night. Now I know you are right.'

"I looked out the window.

" 'It's a beautiful day,' I said. 'You'll never have a finer one to enlist.'

"He didn't say much. Just: 'Thanks, Dad.' "

Flying Fortresses Slashing at the Ruhr

That was the second of December, 1940. On December 14, the boy was called up for his examinations. On December 20 he was notified that he had passed and that he was to report at East St. Louis to start his training as an air cadet.

From there he went to Randolph Field . . . to Brooks Field . . . to one field and another across the country. He had his wings and his commission as second lieutenant. He learned night flying and blind flying. Became a first lieutenant. We were in the war now. And now he was a captain and was sent to Orlando as an instructor. Giant bombers were rolling from the assembly lines and he was assigned to pilot one of them.

"When we were here for the world series last fall," Billy said, "he called me up.

" 'I'm at Bangor, Me.,' he said. 'I don't think we'll be here long. I can't get down to see you, and I wish, as soon as the series is over, you could get up here.'

"I had to go back to St. Louis after the last game," Billy said. "I had to be there for the celebration, but I left just as soon as I could and flew to Bangor. I had four days with him . . . The next time I heard from him he was in England."

You read of Flying Fortresses slashing at the Ruhr . . . hammering at docks and factories . . . blasting roads and dams...softening up the Continent for the eventual invasion. Next time you read one of those stories, remember that among the gallant kids who go on those raids is Capt. Billy Southworth, D. S. M., who was on his way to the major leagues — but couldn't wait to get there when he saw a war coming on.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Dodgers Defeat Cardinals 5-2 To Even Series

Hand Mort Cooper Second Defeat of Season; Melton Is Winner

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, May 20 (AP)—After seeing nothing but southpaw pitching for three days, the Brooklyn Dodgers finally met up with a right hander today and the sight of Mort Cooper was so welcome that they whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 5 to 2 to gain an even split in their four-game series.

Cooper, the leading pitcher in the National League last year and winner of three games against one defeat before today, was ineffective although he fanned seven men. He gave up seven walks and eight hits and lost the decision in the first inning when the Dodgers scored three unearned runs.

In contrast, Frank (Rube) Melton went to the mound on two days rest after curbing the Cardinals 1 to 0 in a twilight game Monday and had no trouble except in the fourth frame when St. Louis scored both its runs.

Melton, the lean right handed ace whom the Dodgers obtained from the Phillies during the winter, kept seven hits scattered and might have had a shutout but for a spell of wildness in the fourth when he permitted two singles and three walks, forcing in one of the Red Birds' runs.

The Dodgers loaded the bases in the first on two walks and an error by Lou Klein and tallied once on a fly by Paul Waner and twice on a tremendous double by Billy Herman. They loaded the bases again in the fifth on two singles and a walk and this time Cooper committed a balk to let in a run. Then Dolph Camilli opened the seventh with a triple high against the right field scoreboard and came home when Debs Garms and Buster Adams, St. Louis outfielders, collided under Herman's fly, which was scored as a double.

The SPORT TRAIL

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Sometimes the last person to realize he is slipping is the gent whose head is about to nudge the ice, so it is a relief to meet an athlete who not only knows he isn't the athlete he once was, but admits it.

He is Paul Waner, the 40-year-old Brooklyn outfielder, who says frankly that as long as seven or eight years ago he began to feel he was slowing up. Either that, he says, or they had moved first base a step farther from home plate when he came to bat, as the bounders he used to beat out he wasn't beating out any more.

He's had plenty of chance the last few years to ponder the process of gradually slowing up, or down, and he's formed his own opinion as to why baseball players voluntarily retire.

Gets Stiff Now

"They get disgusted with themselves," he says. "They find themselves missing line drives they used to take easily, and are nipped at first on infield balls they used to beat out. They also get charley horses and lame muscles more easily. Me, I don't get tired. I just get stiff (don't get that wrong, please) all over and would like to take a long walk afterward to limber up. I do notice I don't have the hitting power I used to have."

Big poison, who, from a weight standpoint, has been smaller than Little Poison the last few years, always has prided himself on his eyesight, and not without reason. He's one of the few players who can foul off balls practically at will, waiting for a pitch he likes.

"Just yesterday," he was saying the other day, "I had two strikes on me and saw one coming I didn't like, but which might catch a corner, so I fouled it off. I turned to Babe (Pinelli) and said: 'that would have been pretty close,' and he said yes, he would have had to call me out on it."

Waner says he isn't afraid of getting hit by a pitched ball while wearing glasses, because he knows how to get out of the way of bad pitches.

"I think fifty per cent of the ball players don't know how to duck," he says. "I'm perfectly relaxed up there. Sure, I've been hit on other parts of the body. But I think I could stand up there all day and let them throw at me and never get hit in the head. The only time I ever was beaned was once back in 1925."

Philosophy Has Changed

The trim little guy never seems to look at a pitcher when standing at the plate. He'll gaze down the left field or right field foul line, or toward shortstop, and you think he doesn't know where the ball is coming from and is preparing for any emergency.

As a matter of fact, he looks at the pitcher as briefly as possible.

"In that way you don't get confused by their windup," he explains. "They can jump up and down and tie themselves into knots as far as I'm concerned. After all, I'm not trying to hit the pitcher. I'm trying to hit the ball."

Waner's philosophy has changed in recent years. He admits that early in his career he thought mostly of his base hits, and would sit down each night and figure out his average. Now he doesn't think about his average. If he can get one hit that will help to win a game he figures that's better than getting four or five when they don't count. He's strictly a team man now.

A great little guy is Big Poison, and one of the most remarkable athletes in the game. We're for him 100 per cent.

Beau Jack Is 1-2 Favorite over Bob Montgomery

Crowd of 18,000 Is Expected To See Fight in Garden Tonight

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—After taking on lightweight champions five times in two years, Philadelphia Bob Montgomery finally gets a shot at the championship tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden against Beau Jack, the one-time shoe-shine boy from Georgia.

This 15-round fuss for the New York half of the 135-pound crown marks the return of boxing to the Garden after six weeks in which Gus fan has been watching the Elephants and the clowns from another circus do their stuff.

As a result and picking up in this first summer "sock" show where they left off in last winter's million-dollar season—the fans are expected to chip in to a $75,000 pot. In fact, Promoter Mike Jacobs won't be at all disappointed if some 18,000 show up.

The Jumping Jack is a little slambang Buzzsaw kind of a clouter who skyrocketed out of Dixie's "Battle Royal" rings a couple of years ago. He boomed up the trail so fast from the time he decided to switch his career from blacking boots to doing the same to eyes that he not only has grabbed the lightweight crown, but also has knocked off two such ranking welterweights as Fritzie Zivic and Henry Armstrong.

Because of this, along with the fact that the Garden battle pit has been a particularly lucky business office for the Beau, the betting gentlemen have tabbed him a 1 to 2 choice in this first defense of the crown the New York State Athletic Commission handed him last December, during Sammy Angott's temporary "abdication."

However, Montgomery has a lot more experience than Beau Jack. Along his route, the Quaker City slugger split two outings with Lew Jenkins and gave Angott three closer shaves than Sammy ever got from his razor. All five of these bouts, incidentally, occurred while laughing Lew and swarthy Sammy were head men of the lightweights. All were non-title affairs.

What's more, the Montgomery cheering and chowder society thinks the 15-round derby route is just what the doctor would not order for the Bouncing Beau. They point out that he "ran out of gas" in the closing rounds of each of his last three brawls and barely lasted to the pay-off window.

RODROCK'S MAECASE WINS HER FIRST RACE AT CHARLES TOWN

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—Tommy Rodrock's Maecase, a winner at Pimlico, turned in her first victory of the Charles Town race meeting today by taking a photo decision from Joe Bruno's Olympian in the sixth race, best event of a featureless card.

In third position in the field of six which contested the about seven furlongs was Sunset Boy, the favorite from the stables of S. W. Labrot, Jr.

Ridden by Jockey Stanley Austin, Maecase returned $8.20 for $2 to her scattered backers and registered time of 1:25 3-5 for the long sprint route.

Attendance fell to less than 3,000 persons, apparently as the result of the new ban on pleasure driving.

Olympian set the early pace, with Sunset Boy close up. On the back stretch, Sunset Boy faltered when placed to a drive while Maecase moved up boldly on the inside. In the stretch, Olympian weakened gradually and Austin took Maecase out for the final test. Approaching the wire, Maecase took brief lead but then hung and just lasted to take down the major share of the purse.

E. Piersanti's Stolen Sweets won the first race, returning a $26 mutuel to set the stage for a $150.20 payoff in the daily double. The second race was won by H. G. Tonkin's War Glenn, a $5 favorite.

Maryland and Hopkins To Play Lacrosse

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 20 (AP)—The University of Maryland Lacrosse team will wind up its current season on Saturday when it meets the John Hopkins ten of Baltimore in a game which will have an important bearing on the National title.

The Old Liner baseball team will play the Curtis Bay Coast Guard ouefit the same afternoon.

Lacrosse squads from Maryland and Hopkins have already met twice during this calendar year. Last spring Hopkins downed the old Liners 7 to 5, but during the summer the latter handed the Jays 8 to 1 and 8 to 0 defeats.

Lefty Gomez Is Released by Boston Braves

Former Yankee Pitcher Did Not Get To Pitch Single Ball This Year

By BILL KING

BOSTON, May 20 (AP)—Although he has been let out by the Boston Braves without throwing a single pitch for them in National League competition, the affable Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, a New York Yankee standout for thirteen seasons, was without rancor today as he started planning his immediate future at the nowadays tender age of thirty-two.

"I don't know what's coming up next for me," he said. "The old whip appears to be rounding into shape nicely and while I may not be able to go nine innings just now, I know I could help some club.

"I'm ready for another baseball offer. But if none comes along, I can go back to the defense job I had in Lynn last winter or take one of the couple of business propositions that have been made to me."

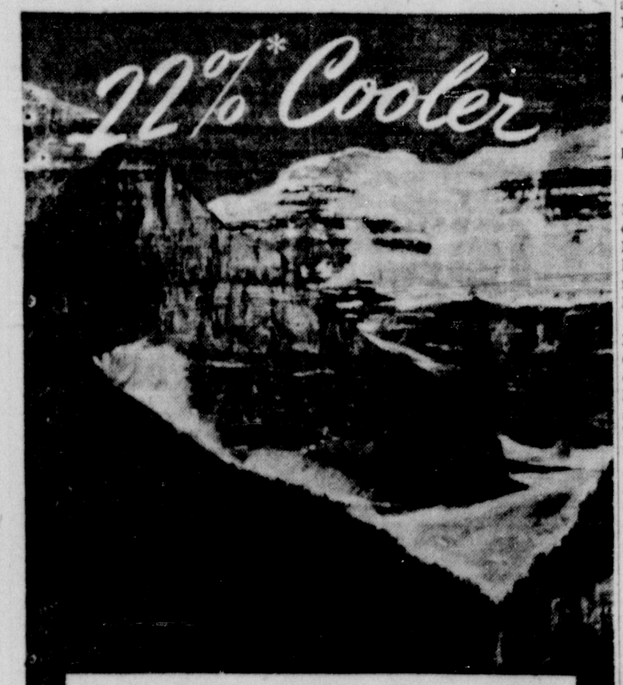

Gomez had nothing but praise for his recent Braves teammates, the most exciting Major League club at this time.

"The Braves have so many good pitchers that I never had a chance to break in on them," Gomez continued. "Jim Tobin and Al Javery are great, Nate Andrews and Red Barrett have much more than it takes and that George Jeffcoat should be a wow.

"Even if I didn't pitch a single inning for them, I'm a Braves booster. They treated me swell, from President Bob Quinn down to the bat boy and I'm pulling for them hard."

Before Quinn, under the pressure of the twenty-five-player limit that becomes effective at midnight, gave Gomez his unconditional release, he tried to place that former American League pitching hero with three other National League clubs. None of them was interested but it is very likely that Gomez may find himself back in the American League in a month or so.

Although the post-war truck will differ but little in its appearance from present-day trucks, it will be stronger and lighter.

LaSalle Downs Hyndman To Climb Into First Place as AHS Wins

Allegany Drops Beall Out of First Place on 12 to 5 Victory

LaSalle high school's fast-stepping baseball outfit journeyed to Hyndman, Pa., yesterday and after battling the Keystone state lads for seven frames they returned home a winner by a 10 to 4 score. The win boosted the Cumberland team to first place in the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball Conference ahead of Beall high, which lost to Allegany 12 to 5.

George Geatz, lanky LaSalle twirler, hurled superb ball and allowed but four bingles while striking out nine batters. He gave up one walk and hit one batter (Leydig). Harden pitched a good game for Hyndman but for a lapse in the fifth when he hit two batters and a combination of timely hits by LaSalle and several errors spelled his doom.

LaSalle scored twice in the second inning when Ingram walked, stole second, Stakem singled sending Ingram to third and Schmutz singled both runners home.

Score Eight Runs in Fifth

In the big fifth frame LaSalle scored eight times with Geatz singling, Cumiskey got on base on Cook's error and the bases were loaded when Laffey was safe on an error. At this point Langan singled two runners home. Carter and Ingram got on base when hit by the pitcher. Fahey singled two men home making four runs scored.

After Stakem and Schmutz flied out Geatz stepped to the plate and smashed a home run scoring Fahey ahead of him. Hyndman made its only counter when Harclerode doubled in the sixth and scored on Cook's single.

While all this was taking place Allegany high entertained the Beall high team of Frostburg at Campobello in rude fashion by defeating them 12 to 5 thereby sending the Frosty City lads down to second place in tie with Fort Hill.

Allegany Pilfers Eleven Sacks

The Blue and White team stole eleven bases, seven of them in the first inning when they manufactured five runs. Baker singled but was out on Cox's fielder's choice. Cox stole second, Williams got on base on an error, stole second and Cox made third on a wild pitch by Middleton. Gorman singled both runners home and then stole second.

Taylor got on base on an error, stole a base, and he and Gorman scored on Reynolds single. Reynolds stole second and scored on Lee's single. Taylor hit a home run in the third for Allegany. Beall scored four times in the fifth when Byrnes got on base on Cox's error, he was out on a fielders choice by Hughes who stole second and scored on Britt's single.

Day got on base due to Cox's second error. Skidmore and Lashley also got on by two more errors by the jittery Cox. With the sacks loaded Middleton doubled sharply and three men scored. Allegany came back to score twice in the fifth on a double by Gorman, Taylor got a lift on an error and Gorman scored on a wild pitch and Taylor ended up at third. Reynolds singled him home.

Beall scored once in the sixth on a single by Byrnes, Hughes got on due to Bucy's error, Byrnes was tagged at home on a fielder's choice by Britt, and Hughes scored on Day's single. Allegany came back with Baker doubling and scoring on Driver's single. Williams singled and both runners scored on Raupach's double. A wild pitch advanced Raupach to third and Taylor got a base on balls and Raupach stole home during a double executed by him and Taylor.

Beall Makes Triple Play

Feature of the game was a triple play in which Shorstop Britt caught a line smash, relayed the ball to Middleton and he in turn pegged to Cosgrove to catch the third Allegany runner.

The Fort Hill High Sentinels will be heavily favored to defeat the Paw Paw (W. Va.) High Mountaineers in a conference game here today and remain in the running for the championship. The Sentinels whipped Coach John Marra's West Virginians 3-2 in the first meeting. It was the closest Paw Paw has come to winning a game this season, the Mountaineers having dropped five in a row.

In another game today, LaSalle will step outside the conference to meet the All-Stars, a team composed of players from the various classes of the school. George Geatz is scheduled to work on the slab for the Explorers. The contest will start at 4 o'clock and will be staged at Community Park.

Red Sox Take Doubleheader From Indians

CLEVELAND, May 20 (AP)—Boston took both ends of a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians today, winning a 10-inning opener 2 to 1 and topping it with a 7 to 4 triumph in a final that saw 10 pitchers in action.

The Indians used six hurlers in the nightcap as the Red Sox punched out 11 hits, four of them two-baggers. Boston called on three relief pitchers after Kendall Chase faltered in the seventh.

After their tenth inning victory in the first game, the Sox romped into the second half of the bargain bill with a three-run spree in the first inning, and scored again in the third, eighth and ninth.

Thenase, a lefthander, yielded five hits in six innings and gave way to Mike Ryba, who gave two hits, two runs and a walk while getting one man out in the seventh. Mace Brown was on duty for the last portion of the seventh and got credit for the win before being replaced by Yank Terry who finished the game.

The parade over the Cleveland mound started with Pete Center, who lasted less than an inning. Vernon Kennedy, Joe Heving, Ray Poat, Mike Naymick and Al Milnar were other Indian flingers.

Poat was charged with the defeat.

In the opener, catcher Johnny Peacock singled John Lazar home with the winning run in the tenth, Pairint it with a first inning tally for the victory. Cleveland's lone firsct game score was made in the fifth inning when Oris Hockett doubled off the right field wall to score Buddy Rosar.

Southpaw Judd pitched the first game victory, giving up seven hits, while his mates nicked Jack Salveson and Allie Reynolds for the same number.

Lou Novikoff Ends Long Holdout and Signs with Cubs

CHICAGO, May 20 (AP)—Phillip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, said tonight that holdout Lou Novikoff had come to terms and was enroute from his Los Angeles home to join the club.

Wrigley said that Clarence Rowland, president of the Los Angeles baseball club, carried on the negotiations with Novikoff through instructions by the Cubs' general manager, James J. Gallagher.

Gallagher, who has been with the club during its eastern swing, was on his way to Chicago tonight presumably to confer with the "Mad Russian" tomorrow.

Wrigley was informed of Novikoff's agreement tonight by Rowland in Los Angeles and indicated he was pleased that the issue had at last been settled.

On the afterpiece the Phils got their two runs in the third inning off Dick Barrett. Murtaugh singled and dashed to third on Busby's sacrifice when the Cubs left the bag unguarded. Litwhiler singled him home and scored the second run a few minutes later on Ed Stanky's wild throw.

Birmingham-Ballard Capture Dux Tourney

The combination of Frank Birmingham and Margaret Ballard clicked in the Celanese Staff Mixed Bowling League's recent handicap doubles tournament at Club Recreation to carry off first honors with a gross count of 930.

The winning pair had a combined handicap of 52 but did not need the allowance as they turned in a total of 878 sticks to top the "scratch" efforts of all the other duos by a wide margin.

Birmingham carried off individual honors among the men with a 210 game and 567 set count while M. Fahey was high among the women with 413.

Joseph Felton and Louise Crane, rolling from scratch, trailed the leaders with 819. The summary:

American League Schedule Messed Up by Weather

CHICAGO, May 20 (AP) — The tight-fitting American League baseball schedule virtually became a noose on four Western clubs' series with Eastern rivals today as the result of a record set of postponements.

President Will Harridge said conditions were so serious in at least two cases that open dates would have to be utilized or the games would have to be played off when the Western clubs make their Eastern trips.

Postponement of all contests on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday constituted a record, Harridge said. Now the series matching Philadelphia at Chicago, Washington at St. Louis, New York at Detroit and Boston at Cleveland are so crowded that in one case the teams have more than twice as many games left than they have scheduled playing dates.

Four of Washington's contests at St. Louis have been postponed. The Senators play there five more days this year, but doubleheaders already are slated for two of those five days, leaving three dates in which to play seven contests.

That situation is nearly duplicated in the Philadelphia at Chicago series, with four postponed games piled up and only four single dates open. One more postponement of Boston at Cleveland will cause a similar jam there.

Detroit already has rescheduled postponed games with New York on open dates. But if those days weren't available the Tigers would have faced the necessity of playing double-headers with the Yankees every day they meet in Detroit the rest of the season.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Be Ready To Battle Cucumber Beetles

By DEAN HALLIDAY

If the cucumber vines in last year's victory garden became diseased it will be best this year to plant the vines in a different section of the garden and select disease resisting varieties. The Chinese variety, for example, is extremely disease-resistant. It is claimed in fact, that this variety is free of both blight and fungus diseases. Longfellow is another variety that is a vigorous grower and is less subject to disease than many other varieties. Long Green also is usually handy and disease-resistant.

Cucumber wilt is carried from one plant to another by the striped cucumber beetle, illustrated in the accompanying Garden Graph, and certain other beetles. The beetle carries the spores of this wilt disease on its back. The first sign of this disease is a wilting of the cucumber vine leaves, as illustrated. Shortly thereafter, the entire vine wilts and then dies. Young plants can be protected against both the striped cucumber beetle and the twelve-spotted beetle by spraying the plants with rotenone, pyrethrum or tobacco dust.

Mosaic or white pickle disease causes stunted cucumber vines and wrinkled or mottled foliage. The crop will be smaller as a result of this disease and the fruits on a diseased plants are often crooked and covered with green warts, as illustrated, or the fruit may be nearly white in color.

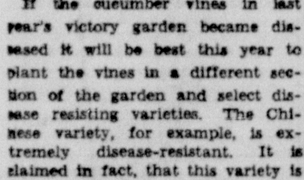

Mosaic disease lives over-winter on the seeds of wild cumumber, milkweed and pokewood and is carried to the cultivated cucumber vines by the striped beetle.

READ THE SIGNPOSTS

IN A DELICATE contract, the declarer should be something like a traveler in strange territory. He should watch for every signpost, and read every direction with great care. The same goes, incidentally, for the defenders. Sometimes a road which seems at first to be unmarked is clearly pointed out by not one, but a number of different guides.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	4 ♥

East played his 4 on his partner's lead of the spade Q. Declarer won it with the A and returned the heart 5 to the J, East winning with the A and sending back the spade 9. West overtook it with the 10, but clearly both he and the declarer failed to grasp the significance of that card, though the 3 was out of sight.

West now shifted to the club 5, which dummy ducked, the A scoring for East. Not liking any lead from his hand, he used his heart 8, which South took. The diamond finesse was now tried, and failed, putting him down one.

West should have read the spade 9 return to the second trick, when he knew his partner had the K and also probably the 3, as significant, the use of the higher spot card meaning he wanted West to return the higher-ranking of the other side suits, diamonds instead of clubs. Had he done that, the contract would have been beaten with a trick in each suit, just as it was. But that would have been a set which was not dependent on declarer's erring later.

With the club return being the 5, South should have ducked in dummy as he did, the A playing, and when he won the returned heart, should have counted West for the club J under the Rule of Eleven. The size of West's lead, 5, subtracted from 11, leaves 6, the number of higher cards in the three other hands. Thus he was marked with the J, not only on the first lead of the suit, but thereafter. Hence that card could have been finessed against, and so two diamonds could have been discarded on the clubs. That would have avoided the risk of the diamond finesse, which was clearly marked to South as a loser by East's return lead of that spade 9 in place of the K or 3.

There's Always Mañana

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

by LOIS EBY and JOHN C. FLEMING

"I don't know," Steve laughed. "That halo you're wearing is very becoming."

SYNOPSIS

Notified that her brother, MELVIN MARSDEN is missing in action, JEAN MARSDEN, who has risen to the top as a fashion model, quits her job to become secretary to STEVE LANDIS, director of a new rubber plant in Mexico. Jean has an abrupt introduction to carefree, handsome CURLEY, employed by MR. AND MRS. PARKINSON, owners of the Rancho Casolina.

* * *

YESTERDAY: Jean and Steve see the train bearing part of the secret rubber formula wrecked as it nears the town.

CHAPTER SEVEN

AS THE station wagon bumped and jolted over the shally, rock-strewn slope between the highway and the railroad tracks, Jean suddenly screamed and pointed.

Through the dusk the figures of several men could be seen leaping from the overturned baggage car. The first one took a look at the station wagon approaching, then turned to run for a car parked some distance up the roadbed. The two others followed, one of them limping as he ran.

"Be careful!" Jean cried. For Steve was turning the car's searchlight full on the fleeing figures while he pushed the accelerator to the floor.

"Look, they've got the mail bag all right!" His face was white with fury, and Jean thought for one terrified instant he was going to smash the station wagon into the other car. But he glanced at her suddenly, as though remembering she was along. In the next breath he had slammed on the brakes, holding out his arm to keep her from going through the windshield with the violent jerk of the stop. Pulling on the emergency, he ordered, "Stay here!" and flung open the door.

"Steve!" she cried wildly. "Steve—don't!"

But he was gone, running toward the car into which the men were now piling. A shot rang out. Jean moaned and closed her eyes. But when they switched open again, Steve still was running, returning the saboteurs' fire as he went. Their car swerved ahead just as he reached it. With a long leap, he made the running board and clung there. As the car gathered speed they pushed him off. His body rolled in a cloud of dust down the slope toward the tracks.

Jean, screaming, stumbling, was halfway to him before the bandits' car had reached the highway. She knelt beside him as he opened his eyes dizzily, then sat up.

"The rats!"

At the dopey belligerence on his face, Jean's terror abruptly was released into a hysterical laugh. She pulled him back when he started to rise. "Lie still a minute till we see if you're shot full of holes," she ordered.

"I'm all right."

Apparently he was, except for torn clothes, scratches, bruises and a badly sprained wrist.

"Going over to the train!" He still was panting. "Stay here."

But Jean's spirits were soaring with the excitement of it now that the nightmare of the first moments was over. "I won't stay here. I'm going with you," she cried.

The engine still was throbbing, steam pouring up through the dusky defile of the canyon as they made their way toward the overturned cars. Steve halloed, and suddenly a head appeared over the edge of the open baggage car door. It was the Mexican engineer. He and Steve carried out the other victim—a Mexican trainman, bleeding and unconscious. They propped him on one of the station wagon seats and Steve supported him while Jean drove to the company shack that Steve shared with several of the plant engineers.

By the time she drew up before the lighted, shed-like building, the Mexican trainman had regained consciousness and was being violently sick. The engineer's face beside her was covered with blood. He was muttering Spanish oaths as he wiped it from his eyes with a ragged forearm. Jean's fastidious soul recoiled. She wanted to escape from the misery, blood and sickness. She told herself they didn't need her, and turned to tell Steve she was going to walk to the village. Then she had a sudden glimpse of Steve's jaw clamped tight with pain as he and the engineer lifted the trainman from the car.

"Your wrist!" she cried, remembering. "Don't lift him!" She ran to the door of the shack and pounded on it. A tall, lanky engineer appeared in the lighted opening.

"What's the matter?" He peered at the disheveled mass of her hair, at her mussed, soiled white riding habit and then beyond to the station wagon.

"There's been a wreck," Jean shouted above the radio music inside the shack. "Help Mr. Landis!" She went into the shack to meet two plant engineers coming from sleeping rooms, and she heard her voice going on with clipped authority, "Help me fix this cot to put him on. And will you heat some water? Where are your first aid supplies?"

An hour later, Jean stepped back from the neat bandages she had wound around Steve's head and left arm. "There. Considering the handicap I was working under, I think that arm is pretty neat," she declared, passing a trembling, weary iodine-strained hand across her forehead.

Steve grinned guiltily. He hadn't been a good patient, having insisted on continuing with his phoning while she worked on his arm. He had been on the phone almost steadily, getting the police on the saboteurs' trail, tracking down the town's one doctor, and sending code wires to his company headquarters.

"Did I ever ask you how you'd stand up in an emergency?" he said. "Lady, you'll do. You've been bossing us around like a top sergeant AND getting results. Remind me to turn over the plant to you to manage." He whistled to the wispy little Mexican cook just setting a bowl of soup before the engineer. "Bring the senorita some of that, too, Concha. And a napkin."

Jean slowly rolled down the sleeves of her white silk shirt. Her gaze wandered about the room with a measure of pride in her accomplishments. The train engineer, bathed, disinfected and bandaged, was on a cot brought from one of the bedrooms, smacking his lips with loud contentment between each gurgling draught of soup. The other trainman was on the living room couch, a compress on the swelling bump on his head where he had been black-jacked, a makeshift splint on his broken hand until the doctor arrived. Steve's roommates still were hurrying about carrying out kettles and washbasins and sorting the first aid equipment.

"At last I managed to put that first aid course to some use." She shipped into her riding jacket and moved across to a mirror to straighten her hair and run a lipstick across her pale lips. She smiled a little ruefully at her reflection. "I'll bet," she murmured, throwing a quick smile, "that if I'd walk into your office NOW to ask for a job, you wouldn't consider me too beautiful to be useful."

"I don't know." Steve laughed skeptically as he poured hotter water on his sprained wrist. "That halo you're wearing is very becoming."

"You probably tell that to all the girls."

The Mexican engineer looked up from his spoon of soup to scrutinize them, and Steve and Jean stifled chuckles at his bewilderment.

The doctor arrived, buzzing with excitement and curiosity. He was disappointed that there had been no shooting or stabbing. And then finally came Steve's long-awaited call from police headquarters.

"No trace of the car yet. They're covering all the main roads." Steve replaced the receiver with an awkward left hand, frowning his disappointment. "If the number plate only hadn't been covered up! The chief of police is leaving a lieutenant on the desk to get the reports, and coming out to question us."

Jean looked up from the table. "I'll stay until he goes, then."

But Steve, noticing her weary pallor, the listless stabs she was making at her soup, ordered Howard to take her home. "I think I saw everything you did. If he wants to question you personally, as our friend says, 'There's always manana'."

His words brought Curley's laughing black eyes back with sudden clarity. Jean's spirits seemed to lift again from their after-excitement drop. "There's always manana," she smiled back at Steve as she followed the lanky Tanner out into the warm Mexican night.

"And thanks again!" Steve's voice called after her.

Ban on Pleasure Driving Puzzles Dealers Here

Check Shows Plenty of Gasoline on Hand; Restriction Irks Motorists

Gasoline dealers and service station operators in this area, their storage tanks filled almost to the brim with gasoline, were "puzzled" and "mad," to say the least, yesterday with the OPA announcement that the ban on pleasure driving is again effective.

It was the general opinion of the man on the street that the OPA announcements first placing the ban in effect then lifting it and now enforcing it once more are "confusing."

Many motorists with "A" ration books only, stated emphatically that "I'm using my gallon-and-a-half a week the way I want to. Let the investigators follow me. If they take up my book I know where I can get plenty of gas without it," one man said.

Police Await Orders

In the meantime, state, county and city police were awaiting orders to begin enforcement of the ban as announced by OPA officials. When the ban was effective several months ago, state police here were notified by teletype from their headquarters in Baltimore and the sheriff's office never received any request at all to enforce the restriction on driving.

Although he asked that he not be quoted, one dealer here said last night "there's plenty of gasoline in Western Maryland if they'd let us go ahead and sell it. What I have to say about it (the ban on pleasure driving), you wouldn't dare print."

Another dealer, who likewise asked not to be quoted, said the "supply here is equal to the demand" and stated that "there is plenty of gasoline in storage here to last for twenty days if we didn't get another drop." He estimated that there are 700,000 gallons between the (retail) dealers and ourselves.

Supply Is "Excellent"

The ban, he said, is "a hard thing to understand," and added that he has made regular reports to War Price and Rationing Board No. 1-1 for transmission to Washington that the supply here is "excellent."

Dealers, he continued, are "well-stocked" and, he related, "we have had to delay some receipts (of gasoline until we could get some we have on hand moved out. At Pittsburgh where we get our supply there seems to be plenty available. I don't know what it's all about."

On the other hand, another dealer said "there's a reason for it" although, he added the supply in Cumberland is "very good."

He explained, however, that "everything that can be diverted from this area to the Eastern seaboard puts us just that far ahead."

No Politics

If the gasoline were not needed in "North Africa or Europe or somewhere else," he said, "I don't think there would have been any curtailment. I'm no Democrat but I don't think there's any politics mixed up in it."

But the man on the street isn't taking the pleasure driving ban in quite that fashion. One person said "they lifted the ban when it was time for us to get new license tags and now that we've got them they try to make us stop driving again. Well, I bought a fishing license yesterday and I'm going fishing Sunday, ban or no ban. If some of these people who aren't entitled to them can get 'B' and 'C' coupons, I'm going to use my "A" book to suit myself."

Motorists May Use Cars for Essential Shopping, OPA Rules

Motor trips to summer resorts and commutation by automobile between such resorts and one's office definitely are prohibited by the pleasure-driving ban, the state office of the OPA announced yesterday.

Banned also by the new order is the use of automobiles for the following purposes: trips to night clubs, amusement parks, movie and legitimate theaters and the race track; going to work when public transit facilities between home and job are adequate, and trips to restaurants some distance from one's residence.

Motorists still may use their cars for essential shopping and marketing, to take children to school and to attend church or go to funerals, OPA officials said.

Plans Are Upset For Post-War Planning Dinner

New Ban on Driving May Cause Change in Arrangements and Date

Because of the new ban on non-essential car driving, plans have been upset for the post-war planning dinner meeting scheduled for the evening of June 17 at the Ali Ghan country club by the chamber of commerce.

The meeting is to be held on that date or another date near it, depending on what arrangements can be made, at some place in the city, perhaps the Central Y. M. C. A.

The Membership Activities committee of the chamber has charge of the arrangements and it was instructed at the monthly meeting of the chamber directors last night to go ahead as circumstances will permit.

The Executive committee of the chamber has deemed it advisable to set up a special committee to keep in touch with developments in post-war planning and do whatever may be feasible in planning locally for the readjustments that will be necessary when the war ends.

Edmund S. Burke is chairman of this committee, the other members being Henry W. Price, Thomas F. Conlon, Charles A. Piper, Edward R. Allen, Thomas E. Gilchrist and Roy W. Eves.

A report submitted to the directors on industrial salvage disclosed the collection of 2,278,396 pounds of scrap during April.

A resolution was unanimously passed commending the work of Roy Lottig, general chairman, and his assistants in making the annual Community Chest drive a success.

A report from the United States Employment Service showed a marked drop in registrations locally. The total on May 15 was 2,020, of which 728 were men and 1,292 women. The local office reported replacements of 398 in private employment for the month ending on that date.

Public Schools Will Open 88-day Vacation June 11

Fall Term To Commence Sept. 8; Teachers Will Meet Sept. 7

Allegany county public schools will close on the afternoon of Friday, June 11, for the eighty-eight day summer vacation period, Charles L. Kopp, superintendent, announced yesterday.

The schools will reopen on the morning of Wednesday, September 8.

The county superintendent said he is already giving attention to securing teachers for next year. He pointed out that 161 out of 495 teachers have resigned since last May and expects more resignations before the fall term starts.

While the task of getting even substitute teachers is becoming harder, Kopp said he feels certain a full staff will be available for next year.

Lack of Farm-to-Market Roads Is Grave Problem, Rep. Beall Says

Stresses Essentiality of Secondary Road System to Economic and Social Structure of Nation

WASHINGTON, May 20. (AP)—Rep. Beall (R-Md) told the House Roads committee today there was a lack of farm-to-market roads which constituted "one of the gravest transportation problems confronting the nation."

J. Glenn Beall

Stressing the "essentiality of the secondary road system to the economic and social structure of the nation," Beall told the committee, of which he is a member, that the nation was becoming more and more dependent upon the utilization of farm-to-market roads and that virtually all food supplies make their initial movement from the farm by truck.

The former chairman of the Maryland State Road Commission said that "a number of large cities now receive their entire milk supply and sixty-four per cent of the live stock received at seventeen of the country's largest stockyards moves over roads." He added that another important factor demanding immediate improvement of local roads was the "present tendency of processing agriculture products nearer the farm."

"Today," he said, "portable machines freeze and prepare right in the field the farm commodities for shipping. That is but an indication of what we may expect in the future."

He told the committee that damage being caused by war traffic threatened to disrupt local transportation, and urged the "immediate enactment" of legislation which would provide federal funds to assist the states and counties to repair secondary roads damaged by war traffic.

Beall spoke in favor of a bill (HR2113) which would make federal funds available for the planning of highway projects to be constructed during the postwar era, and would make federal funds available to assist the states in acquiring rights-of-way for post-war highway projects.

"I think the bill before this committee should be approved," Beall said, "but I do not believe it goes far enough. Damage to local roads by war traffic constitutes an immediate and acute problem and I hope the committee will include remidal legislation in the bill."

Dawson, Kelley Electrical Firm Partners, Retire

William R. E. Smith To Continue as Sterling Electric Service

The Sterling Electric Company, one of Cumberland's oldest electrical contracting firms, has dissolved with the retirement of Edgar J. Dawson, president, and J. Joseph Kelley, secretary-treasurer, but William R. E. Smith, vice-president, will continue in business at the same store, 100 North Centre street, under the trade name of Sterling Electric Service.

Discussing the breaking up of the partnership which has conducted business on North Centre street for twenty years, Smith said:

"There isn't enough work for a corporation of this kind to continue in business these days but an individual might stand a chance."

The fact that building construction has been deferred and electrical contracting jobs are few and far between coupled with the scarcity of equipment due to the war, are given as the reasons why Dawson and Kelley decided to step down.

"In addition to the lack of materials we are unable to get refrigerators, washers and we haven't been able to get an electric iron for six months," Smith declared.

Smith plans to operate a general repair business and will service washers and refrigerators.

The firm of Dawson, Smith and Kelley opened business on North Centre street in 1923 and during their twenty years together fulfilled many large contracts, including Fort Hill high school, Allegany high school, Montgomery Ward and Company's store, Frostburg State Teachers college, Celanese Corporation of America offices and last but not least the Memorial hospital addition which is practically completed.

Prior to forming their electrical contracting partnership, Dawson, Smith and Kelley were employes of the old Edison Electric Illuminating Company, which later was absorbed by the Potomac Edison Company.

Control Practices For Soil Erosion Are Discussed

Representatives of Farm Organizations and AAA Committeemen Confer

Control practices for soil erosion in this area and fertilizing materials and their use in 1944 were favorably discussed by representatives of farm organizations and committeemen at the AAA county conference held yesterday, according to Hamilton Linthicum, field officer for the Agricultural Adjustment Association.

Recommendations on these two phases of farm production along with topics relative to the 1944 agricultural adjustment program will be submitted to the state committee for consideration in the planning of the state and regional programs.

Linthicum stated that farmers still have until June 30 to sign up in this year's AAA program and take advantage of the materials offered and the remuneration paid for meeting production goals. Phosphate supplies are still available to members and although a new lime contract will be in effect after July 1, a lime supply is still available for distribution under the old contract, he added.

This year, Linthicum pointed out, compliance reports in the state will be made on the basis of an honor system, but about two per cent spot checking will be done. Under the AAA program farmers who reach production amounting to ninety per cent of their war goal and have earned their practice units will be eligible to submit their applications for payment. It may be possible, Linthicum added, to secure payment at an earlier date for the 1943 program.

L. C. Byrnes, state AAA committeeman was presented the conference which twenty representatives of the county committeemen, Soil Conservation Service, Federal Security Administration and University of Maryland extension service were present.

Four State-Wide Measures by See Listed as Laws

Trader's License for Blind Is Signed; Juvenile Bill Vetoed

A statewide legislative measure giving blind persons the right to sell any and all kinds of merchandise except alcoholic beverages for a trader's license of $6 a year, is now a law, according to Charles M. See, chairman of the Allegany county delegation in the lower house of the General Assembly.

See made the announcement last evening after returning from Annapolis where he checked on measures that were signed or vetoed by the governor.

Such licenses are not transferable and before obtaining a license a person must produce a certificate from a qualified eye specialist that he has a 22-100 or less vision in both eyes.

This and three other state-wide measures introduced by See became laws with the affixing of Governor O'Conor's signature.

The chief executive also approved a statute authorizing the State of Maryland to increase the old-age assistance to $40 monthly, and the alternate jurors bill.

A bill providing for an increase in the annual salary of the clerk to the Allegany county juvenile magistrate, from $900 to $1,200 annually, was vetoed because of the wording being misleading. It provided that the juvenile magistrate shall sit daily from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., Sundays, legal holidays and Saturday afternoons in the months of June, July and August excepted, for the proper discharge of duties.

It was assumed from the wording of this bill that the magistrate would be required to sit from 9 a. m., to 4 p. m., Sundays, legal holidays and Saturday afternoons during the other nine months of the year.

This measure was introduced by Delegate J. Milton Dick.

American Legion Will Sponsor Ear Clinic on June 16

Dr. Breitstein Will Be in Charge; Project Covers Six Counties

A clinic for the prevention of deafness, one of the major projects of the child welfare program of the American Legion, will be held at the headquarters of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, city hall plaza, June 16, it was announced yesterday by Miss Anne M. Sloan, of Lonaconing, child welfare chairman for the Department of Maryland.

The clinics, held here three times annually, are financed by the Legion, and the clinician is Dr. M. L. Breitstein, of Baltimore.

Miss Sloan pointed out that the most serious cases of deafness among children are examined and then referred to local physicians.

In cases of pre-school children with hearing defects, mothers are urged to contact the public health nurse in their respective districts so that arrangements can be made to have those afflicted examined by Dr. Breitstein.

The American Legion, Miss Sloan said, is spending a sizeable sum each year to carry on this project in which examination is given free of charge. In addition to Allegany county, three clinics are held annually in Washington, Anne Arundel, Montgomery, Prince George's and Baltimore counties and Baltimore city.

An average of forty-five persons are examined at each clinic held in Cumberland, the last one being on February 24.

The June clinic is scheduled to start at 8 a. m.

Community Chest Analysis Shows $59,025 Pledged

Forty-six per Cent of Total Is in Cash; Campaign Goal Was $58,755

An analysis of the 1943 Community Chest campaign, including subscriptions received since the campaign ended, showed that a total of $59,025.28 was received from 6,972 pledges, Harold W. Smith, president, said yesterday afternoon following a meeting of the chest board of directors. Goal for the recently-ended drive was $58,755.

Of the amount subscribed, Smith said $27,189.63 was received in cash representing forty-six per cent of the total and one per cent more than was received in cash last year. There were 1,085 more pledges this year than last, he stated, with $4,959.70 more being pledged.

The final financial report for the year 1942 to March 31, 1943, showed collections of $50,941.60, according to the chest president, with an additional $275.33 being received since then to make a grand total of $51,136.93 or ninety-four and one-half per cent of the pledges.

Goal for the 1942 drive was $57,272.77 and a total of $54,065.58 was raised.

Because the chest oversubscribed its goal this year, Smith said it will enable the agencies to receive the full amount of money allowed them under the budget.

The board also voted to co-operate with the National War Fund, Incorporated, it its campaign to raise funds in the county this fall.

The resignation of F. Allan Westherholt as a member of the board of directors of the chest was accepted with regret. Weatherholt resigned when he entered the armed forces. No successor was chosen.

One person was slightly injured and an automobile was badly damaged at 9:15 a. m. yesterday when the vehicle left the National highway seven miles east of Grantsville, broke off a telegraph pole and crashed through a barbed wire fence.

Mrs. Susan Edna Friend, Sang Run, was the driver of the car, State Trooper Blair J. Buckel said, and was fined $5.75 in Grantsville Trial Magistrate's Court on a reckless driving charge following the accident. The fine was assessed by Magistrate Charles U. Edwards.

Buckel, who investigated, said Mrs. Friend and her husband, Ralph Friend, both employes of the Kelly plant, were enroute to their home at Sang Run when the accident occurred.

Buckel said Mrs. Friend went to sleep while driving and added that the car left the highway on a sharp left curve, broke off the telegraph pole and continued through the barbed wire fence into a field before it was brought to a stop.

Friend suffered a laceration of his forehead and was treated by a Grantsville physician. Mrs. Friend was unhurt.

Damage to the car was estimated by Buckel at between $100 and $150.
